

Sun Interview

More revamping ahead for schools

The 11-member City School Board recently re-elected James W. Buffington of Princess Anne Borough to continue as chairman for another year. The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN put seven questions to him, and here are his answers:

Question: How has greater Virginia Beach's public school system progressed the last few years, looking at it from the inside?

Answer: "There's been considerable progress, and there's considerably more to be made. With the public climate of today, we're continuing at the accelerated rate we've had for the past several years."

Question: What do you consider the primary problem in the school system today, from the board's standpoint?

Answer: "That's easy to answer. The assigning of the proper priorities to the things that are to be done. We have numerous requests from the public and educators. We could use a budget of $50 million, instead of $15 million, to meet them, but just saying 'yes' and doing everything isn't the answer."

Transit idea shunted to committee

A study of mass transit needs proposed by City of Virginia Beach officials has been shunted to a committee as the Southeastern Regional Planning Commission apparently leans to a proposed study favoring Norfolk and Portsmouth.

The regional planning body at a meeting last week sent the local study proposal, prepared by Richard J. Webber, coordinator of urban affairs for this city, to a "technical committee" headed by Supervisor George Underwood of Nansemond County.

Others on the committee are F. Mason Gamage, Virginia Beach planning director; Durwood Curling, Chesapeake planning director; Philip Steadfast, Norfolk Planning director; Brewer Moore, Portsmouth planning director, and City Manager James C. Causey of Suffolk.

An informed source at the regional planning office in Norfolk told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that the regional planners "are concerned about conflict with a transit study already in progress."

He said one already is filed with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for planning aid. It involves proposed "belt-highways" for vehicles within Norfolk and Portsmouth.

The Virginia Beach proposal is for a long-range look at mass transit needs in the entire region. This study would take into account costs, possible rail as well as rubber-tire transportation, routes, authorities and other aspects of mass transit planning on a regional basis.

J.W. Buffington

Question: Is Virginia Beach attracting the qualified teachers every school system needs?

Answer: "Yes, sir. Now that our salaries are up, there are several things that attract them. Their chances of being in a new building and the city's seashores help considerably."

Question: Where do private institutions fit into the educational picture in the city?

Answer: "I think they have a definite part in the educational systems, but this doesn't mean I think public funds should be spent on them."

Question: What are the strong points of the public school system as a whole?

Answer: "The quality of our teaching staffs and our physical plants, admitting some crowding, which detracts from the quality. We haven't had split shifts for some time."

Question: How far ahead does the school board look in its planning?

Answer: "We try to look four, or even five years ahead. But looking beyond 24 months becomes hazy because residential building programs change. It becomes right impractical to look beyond 24 or 30 months without wasting money, because of the fast growth."

Question: Are any major organizational changes being considered?

Answer: "We're looking forward in the next year or so to the streamlining of our organization for better quality. The administrative staff has been working on this seven or eight months, and more administrative positions are needed."

Bloodmobile Sets Visit

The Red Cross Bloodmobile goal is 100 pints of blood for Aug. 11. Only 52 pints were collected on its last visit to Pembroke Mall.

The Bloodmobile will be at the Mall from noon to 6 p.m. next Friday. According to the Red Cross, the summer months are the most difficult ones for the blood program.

New Signal Should Help Thalia Jam

New traffic signals installed at Thalia Road west of Princess Anne Plaza, to give Virginia Beach Boulevard motorists more "green time" are now fully operational.

Frank Williamson, administrative aide to Reeves Johnson of the City Safety Bureau, said an installation crew "worked the bugs out" of the signals last week.

There is a delay in traffic equipment shipments as a result of the national war effort in Vietnam, and a control to coordinate boulevard lights at Plaza Trail and a new main entrance to Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center may not be shipped here for months, Williamson said.

The new signals at Thalia automatically shift to green for eastbound and westbound boulevard lanes when there are no cars waiting to turn left. The old fixed-interval equipment kept the main lights red for some time after turn traffic had cleared the intersection east of Pembroke Mall.

City officials planned the Thalia light change after long lines of cars were becoming delayed there, particularly on weekends as area residents headed for the oceanfront area of Virginia Beach.

The new Plaza shopping entrance was built in June by the City Public Works Department to ease congestion at the boulevard's intersection with Plaza Trail.

Peter Nero

Coming Up

Peter Nero, popular pianist, returns to Virginia Beach this Saturday, Aug. 5, for a concert at 8:30 p.m. at Virginia Beach Civic Center (the Dome) on Pacific Avenue.

His concert is sponsored by local Radio Station WVAB, and he is scheduled to be at the center mall stage at Pembroke Mall Shopping Center at 4:30 p.m. Saturday to sign autographs.

Fifteen local girls vie for the title of Miss Virginia Beach at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 4, at Virginia Beach Civic Center (the Dome). Miss Lynn Prangley, reigning Miss Virginia Beach, and Miss Jane Anne Jayroe of Oklahoma, the reigning Miss America, will participate in the pageant.

The Tidewater Emergency Radio Rescue and Assistance Club will exhibit emergency and communications equipment Aug. 7-11 of next week in the center mall of Pembroke Mall Shopping Center.

Harris Named Top Exec. For Local SUN, WVAB

Jack H. Harris, prominent local radio executive, will become executive director and general manager of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN next Monday, Aug. 7.

The 49-year-old longtime resident of greater Virginia Beach also will become executive director of the local radio station, WVAB (95.50 k.c.) on the same date. He has been associated with WNOR in Norfolk for 18 years, the last nine as general manager.

Harris, who has spent most of his life in this city and lives in the Kempville area, said he resigned from WNOR "primarily because of the tremendous possibilities that exist in the city of Virginia Beach."

"In the SUN and WVAB, we have the only two news media that are devoted entirely to Virginia Beach and its citizens," he added. "I believe the two, with the backing and endorsement of our citizens, will grow as fast as the city is growing."

Before going to WNOR, Harris was assistant sports editor in New York for United Press Radio for five years.

J.H. Harris

He is a graduate of old Oceana High here, attended what is now Old Dominion College, as well as the College of William & Mary in Williamsburg, and received advanced study in commercial radio at Columbia University and the National Broadcasting Company.

He is immediate past president of the Tidewater Association of Credit Managers, is an Elk, a Kiwanian and a member of the Presbyterian church.

Harris and his wife, Margaret, and their two youngest daughters, Linda Mae and Jackie Ann, live on Princess Anne Road here. Linda Mae is a student at Princess Anne High, and Jackie Ann is a student at Kempville High.

Two older daughters are married. They are Mrs. David Cassida and Mrs. Jerry Carington.

New First Colonial Bank Eyes Malibu, Pembroke

By Chet Paschang
Editor

Federal and state authorities may clear the way by early December for a new First Colonial Bank in greater Virginia Beach, according to the local man named president of the bank.

James W. Buffington, now vice president and trust officer for The Bank of Virginia in Norfolk, also said the initial First Colonial office is planned "in the Malibu area" of the city.

He said a second location is planned in the Pembroke Manor area. It has the Pembroke Mall Shopping Center as a main attraction on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Herbert C. Moseley, chairman of the board of Virginia Commonwealth Bankshares, (VCB), a holding company which includes The Bank of Virginia and seven other banks, recently announced that the State Corporation Commission issued a charter for First Colonial Bank.

"We believe the establishment of this new bank in Virginia Beach augurs well for both the entire Virginia Beach community and the Virginia Commonwealth Bankshares," Moseley said. He added that it will enable VCB to expand coverage in the Tidewater area and serve Virginia Beach businessmen and residents alike.

Before the new bank commences business, it needs approval of the State Banking Commissioner, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Buffington said he is "confident" of approval by all three.

The new bank president is a native of Baltimore, Md., attended Staunton Military Academy and American University and the trust section of the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers. He was associated with Fairchild Aircraft Corporation and a number of financial institutions before joining The Bank of Virginia on Jan. 14, 1946.

VCB and its affiliates had total assets of $403,883,401 as of June 30, 1967, compared to $347,757,240 a year earlier.

Buffington, who has lived in Virginia Beach a number of years, is chairman of the City School Board. He also is vice chairman of the Tidewater Chapter, American Red Cross; a trustee of Hampton Roads Educational Television; treasurer for the Southeastern Tidewater Opportunity Project (STOP); a Kiwanian, a member of the advisory committee of the Tidewater Y.W.C.A., the Newcomen Society, the Lafayette Yacht Club, the Round Table Club and Nimmo Methodist Church.

He and his wife, Emily, live at Longview, an early American home which dates back to 1871, at Princess Anne Court House. They have three children.

Squad Launches Drive

The Virginia Beach Rescue Squad has begun its annual Fund Raising Drive which runs through August. The goal is $30,000 according to Peter Agalaro III, fund raising chairman.

Since last August, the squad has assisted some 1,900 persons, most of whom were in serious trouble, and has driven more than 38,613 miles.

Members of the Rescue Squad are volunteers, some of whom have been working for over 10 years to help people in need.

Decentralization Is Local Library Aim

Bill Thomas

By Carolyn McAllen
Sun Writer

Eight years ago last May, old Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County opened the first public library in one room of a house on 22nd Street with approximately 7,000 books.

There are now two public libraries in greater Virginia Beach, one more due to open in September, a fourth being planned, and suggestions made to replace the first one.

Both William S. Thomas, chairman of the Public Library Advisory Board, and Mrs. Margaret Beda, head librarian, mentioned in VIRGINIA BEACH SUN interviews the possibility of a new library for Virginia Beach Borough in 1969 after a branch in Kempville is built in 1968.

Parking is a problem at the 22nd Street branch, and the facilities are crowded, they said. "It's an outdated facility," Thomas added.

But there was no public library at all in 1958 when a hard-working group of women decided the Virginia Beach-Princess Anne County area should have one.

The Princess Anne Junior Women's Club got the ball rolling in 1956 by making a survey to see if a library was needed. Almost a foregone conclusion to those concerned, but a necessary step in seeking state monetary aid.

Then that group, along with the Women's Club of Princess

Anne County, adopted the library as a joint project. (The only library available at that time was a subscription-type operated by Mrs. W. S. Johns. Membership was $2 per year, or 50 cents for 3 months.)

A fund drive was kicked off by a $10,000 donation from the senior Women's Club, "Operation Ice," a four-phase fund raising campaign, was then launched to raise the total to $40,000—in community funds.

On Feb. 7, 1958, well-known local men were "kidnapped" for a day, and taken to the Chamber of Commerce office where they telephoned 300 businessmen for contributions. Volunteers collected donations as they were promised. Mrs. Paul Maestas, now a librarian, was chairman of this project.

The "Secret Nine" (which numbered 11, including four who worked a half day each) were Claiborne Bryant, Rhae Adams, the late Lewis E. Smith, Sidney S. Kellam, James G. Darden, F. Mason Gamage, Herbert Holt, Frank D. Tarrall, William McClanlan, Leo Hoarty, and E. Ashley Haycox.

Mrs. C. Samuel Mason headed a committee to get civic club participation. "I don't know of a civic club that didn't take part," commented Mrs. Maestas recently. There was a door-to-door collection campaign too, and the $40,000 goal was reached.

Although they didn't have a building, the planning committee hired a librarian, Mrs. Aurora Simms, who helped organize the first library. It opened in one room of what is now the 22nd Street library. Mrs. Johns cut the traditional ribbon.

Mrs. Simms resigned in October, 1959, leaving the library without a professional librarian until the following July when Miss Margaret Capps (now Mrs. Beda) was hired.

The 22nd Street library operated as a "regional library" until after the Princess Anne County-Virginia Beach merger in 1963. It recently became part of a Library Department of the greater Virginia Beach city government.

The library budget approved for 1967-68 is $148,142. Of this total, $5,000 will come from the state, $5,000 from federal grants, an estimated $6,000 from fines and fees and the rest from local taxes.

Books, binding, and magazine subscriptions are budgeted at $30,000 for the fiscal year which began July 1. This is included in the $148,142.

Acquiring books and trained employees are two of Mrs.

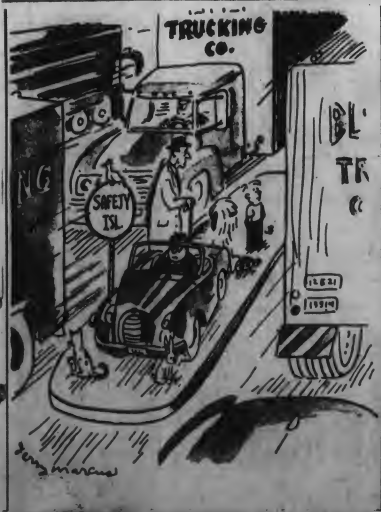

Beda's major problems, she said.

"The pay is unattractive, and we work odd hours," she explained, although she had more applications this year than she did last year. A new librarian, Miss Helen Wagner, began work July 1 at 22nd Street because "she had a yen toward Virginia Beach."

Music Sounds Through the Halls

The halls of seven local schools are alive with the sound of music as more than 500 elementary school students are taking part in a new summer band program, which could boost cultural growth in greater Virginia Beach.

The non-tuition program, financed by the Virginia Beach public schools, is open to elementary school students who have completed the sixth grade and would like to play a musical instrument. About 400 of those taking part are beginners.

One big advantage the summer program has over the regular school program is time, said James Ackels, supervisor of music education for the public schools. He said the teachers can give more individual attention to the students, and the students have more time to practice.

"Teachers can design their schedules to give a more rounded program of instruction, including the various aspects of music theory," Ackels said. Students are in class from 9 a.m. to noon, but some teachers are instructing smaller groups an hour at a time, he said. "Some teachers feel they can accomplish as much in eight weeks as a year's work in the winter." Classes began June 15 and will run through Aug. 11.

"During the regular school year it's usually October before we get bands under way," commented Ackels. "We'd like to pre-register all music students to get a more desirable and flexible schedule whereby schools can better meet the needs of all children in the community."

He said that teachers often have no idea of what to expect in the way of band students until school starts. Another advantage of the summer program, he said, is to give extra instruction to beginners who did not get off to a good start in the previous year.

The overall aim of the music program is "to create an environment where arts can flourish in addition to teaching students the mechanics of some special instrument," said Ackels. "We hope we can develop a discriminating taste in music. We hope these will be the type of people who will support a local symphony orchestra when they become adults."

Classes are held in local high schools which serve as unit centers for a group of elementary schools. Schools and instructors are:

Bayside High School with Charles Daws for Bayside Elementary, Bettie Williams, Hermitage, Luxford, Old Donation and Shelton Park.

Cox High School with Bill Cooper for John B. Dey, Thoroughgood and Trantwood.

First Colonial with Bill Swanson for King's Grant, Linkhorn, Trantwood.

Kempville High with Jerry Cole for Woodstock, Arrowhead, Kempville Meadows and Kemp's Landing (formerly Kempville Intermediate).

Two citywide Tee Baseball tournaments were held recently. The contest drew youngsters from Mares playgrounds. Luxford was the winner for boys 9 and under and Plaza was the winner for boys 10 and 11.

With plenty of rain coming now, a word about keeping the lawn mowed is in order. Try not to cut off more than one-third of the leaf blade per cutting or you may harm your grass. The grass blade is the food processing part of the plant. Thus, if this is removed, then the grass plant's source of food is taken from it. It can only receive water and special nutrients from the soil.

If your grass gets high while you're on vacation, remove about 1/3 of the leaf surface one day, then about three days later, go back and cut it back to the normal height. This should sustain it because during this time, the leaf blades will have become green farther back in the plant.

Libraries

There are presently 21 paid employees, including part-time summer help. Eight, not yet hired, will be needed for the Bayside library on Independence Boulevard when it opens in September, Mrs. Bada said.

According to her, there should be a minimum of one book per person in the city's population of about 150,000. She estimates 22nd Street and Windsor Woods have a total of about 45,000 volumes. The Bayside library initially will have 7,000 books.

The Bayside library will be the same size as the Windsor Woods library—6000 square feet—and has the same modified colonial architecture. It is planned to hold 35,000 volumes eventually. The library staff is busy cataloging and packing books for the new library.

A thousand to 1,500 books are withdrawn from circulation each year because they are beyond repair. Many are then given to charitable organizations.

"They don't go into the garbage until they've passed through many hands," said Mrs. Bada. Another 500 to 600 per year are not returned, she said.

Like in the library's beginning, a door-to-door campaign was inaugurated before Windsor Woods library was built.

"The people were so afraid we wouldn't get one," Mrs. Bada said. More than $5,000 was donated. The land was donated by Joseph Lineberry, who constructed homes in the Windsor Woods area.

The $110,000 Windsor Woods library was financed by 60 per cent city funds and 40 per cent federal funds. The figure does not include books, which are purchased out of budgeted operating funds.

The total cost of the Bayside library is estimated near $140,000, excluding book costs, with $84,192 in city funds committed and $56,128 in federal aid allocated.

Mrs. Bada, who moved last week to new offices in the Bayside branch, said she is preparing an application for federal aid for the Kempville branch. She said 50-per-cent aid is now available, rather than 40 per cent.

There also was community help when the Bayside library was proposed. The Chesapeake Beach Women's Club contributed $15,000 toward it, and others gave smaller amounts. Mrs. Bada said $15,000 is being used to furnish books and equipment in the library's reference room.

The purpose of libraries are multiple, according to Mrs. Bada. "They are educational and informative and they sometimes entertain."

Serving with Chairman Thomas as members of the City Library Board are these residents of the various boroughs:

Mrs. D.J. Wilkins, Bayside; Mrs. Lettie Dozier, Blackwater; Mrs. Gerald Domme, Kempville; Floyd E. Waterfield Jr., Pungo; Mrs. Joe Sadler (a member of the original board in 1958), Virginia Beach; Mrs. Thomas McPartland, Bayside; Mrs. Thaddeus Smith, Lynnhaven; Mrs. Roger Oberndorf, vice chairman, Kempville; Mrs. R.E. Vellines, Bayside; and Mrs. George McGuire, Virginia Beach.

The board, which meets quarterly, will discuss plans for future libraries in Virginia Beach at its next meeting in October, Thomas said.

Plans are now being drawn for a branch in Kempville Borough. It will be built on an acre of land in Bellamy Manor near the intersection of Providence Road and Kempville Road.

Because greater Virginia Beach is so large in area, and because the city has a limited public transportation system, plans for library branches are geared to put smaller libraries in center locations so more people can use them according to Thomas.

"When you consider the fact we started with a small library in Virginia Beach Borough with little outside help, we've made terrific gains," he said.

Sun Backgrounder G.M. School C. O. Started on 'Tin Can'

Capt. Amedeo Henry Galvani, 46, the Navy man who commands a military installation in greater Virginia Beach which trains missile men, literally graduated into a war before graduation day.

That was World War II, which forced the 1943 graduating class of Annapolis to finish studies in June of 1942, seven months after that war began.

Between that time and his assignment as commanding officer of the U. S. Naval Guided Missiles School at Dam Neck, Galvani was virtually a ship-board man.

He was aboard the USS Burns when she was commissioned in April of 1943 at Charleston, S. C., and he remained on the "tin can" during major campaigns in Pacific waters. On Feb. 16, 1944, he earned a bronze star with the combat V for rescuing six Japanese naval prisoners from the water, after the Burns sunk their subchaser in sight of Truk Island. (The USS Burns involved here was decommissioned in late 1957.)

After World War II, Galvani served aboard the USS Dunsmuir, the carrier USS Midway, the destroyers USS Lewis Hancock and USS John Paul Jones, the cruiser USS Newport News and the destroyer tender USS Bryce Canyon, which he commanded in the Western Pacific before coming to Dam Neck.

Galvani, a native of Plymouth, Mass., also has put in some shore duty. He studied ordinance engineering (chemical) at Annapolis and Leigh University, where he earned an M. S. degree; was assistant ordnance officer at the U. S. Naval Ammunition Depot in Hawthorne, Nevada, in the early 1950's, and for three years commanded the Naval Ammunition Depot in McAlester, Okla., before taking command of the Bryce Canyon in late 1965.

When he was executive of-

ficer of the USS Newport News in 1961-62, the ship won the Atlantic Fleet's battle efficiency pennant for cruises.

Among his decorations are the World War II Victory Medal, the Philippine Liberation Ribbon and 10 battle stars on the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal from World War II.

Galvani's wife is the former Helen Frances Pierce of Hyde Park, Mass., and they have four children. The oldest, Bill, is an NROTC student at the University of Oklahoma.

100 Hard-Working Teenagers Devote Time to Helping Others

By Susan Axelrod

While most teenagers are working at summer jobs and saving up for a surfboard, car or college, about 100 Beach young people are acting as camp counselors, nurse's aides, and receptionists—free of charge.

These 100 are members of the Volunteer Service Bureau (VSB) summer job volunteer corps. They are in service to the community and its citizens for much spiritual satisfaction and a non-existent monetary reward.

According to Mrs. T. A. Newton, the only paid VSB worker in greater Virginia Beach, the bureau is able to find jobs for the majority of teens that apply.

"When a girl reaches 16 and comes to the Bureau," says Mrs. Newton, "more than likely, she wants to be a Candy Stripper."

Candy Strippers act as nurse's aides in local hospitals as laboratory assistants and clerical workers.

The second annual water fight, where firemen on opposite teams hosed a bucket along a suspended line, was part of the Plaza volunteers' annual carnival.

Plaza, defending champion, lost to Davis Corner in a preliminary round. Thalia beat Virginia Beach Borough, Kempville downed Oceana and London Bridge whipped Seateak in the preliminaries.

Kempville, with Capt. John Perry heading the team and Keith White as nozzlemaster, beat London Bridge to go against Davis Corner and finish in second.

of service, although Mrs. Newton tries to place them in the jobs they will enjoy.

Many summer teen volunteers are working at Camp Civitan, which is sponsored by Civitan International, a community service club. Camp Civitan is just for physically-handicapped and mentally-retarded children. The VSB representatives aid the children in games, swimming, and other outdoor camp activities.

Volunteer Service Bureau workers also help in area anti-poverty programs; they are the 89-10 program, aimed at the school-age child, and Headstart, which prepares pre-schoolers.

Mrs. Howard Kahn, a member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Optometric Association, is in charge of Volunteers for Vision, a program incorporated with Headstart. Volunteers for Vision is composed of teen helpers who give visual screening tests to socially-deprived pre-schoolers. As in the case with most services, the volunteers undergo a period of orientation to fami-lize them with their particular job.

Another anti-poverty program that works with the young people is 89-10. Taking place in 12 area schools, the 89-10 program has enrichment classes that prepare school children for the coming year.

Many VSB workers take turns having physical therapy sessions with nine-year-old Mark Land, whose brain was injured when he was struck by a car. Along with the bureau's volunteers that help Mark are numerous military wives and scouts, both boys and girls, who work in teams to restrain his muscles and nerves. Mrs. Newton, said she understands that the therapy is "helping tremendously."

According to Mrs. Newton, the purpose of the Junior Volunteer Program, which is in its fifth summer of operation, is to teach young people to learn to help those who need help and to occupy their time and minds."

VSB is supported by the United Communities Fund.

Hope: 'Beyond the Call'

The shock and tragedy which comes with a sudden Naval disaster in time of war hangs over some homes in our city today as a result of the accident on the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal in the Gulf of Tonkin off Vietnam.

And yet, such untimely accidents are bound to happen as pressure mounts on both men and machines defending our nation and its commitments far from home shores.

The men who go to sea, particularly those who fly and maintain the Intruders and Sky-Hawks of Fighter Squadrons 11 and 74 and Attack Squadron 65 of NAS Oceana, are aware of the dangers they face.

This, however, does not erase the burden of grief. It only reminds us that as long as men cannot live peacefully together, there are some who must have far more than an ounce of courage and a pound of endurance.

We can assure the families of those who met death in the Forrestal disaster, as well as those men who have died in hostile action against the enemy, that most citizens of greater Virginia Beach share their grief, appreciate their sacrifices and applaud their courage.

Lt. Cmdr. Herbert Hope, a Virginia Beach man who escaped the death which swept the carrier's flight deck, raised our spirits with this comment from the ship: "I have never seen so many people voluntarily exposing themselves and doing things that were really above and beyond the call."

Wanted: A 'Big Heart' Fund

Volunteers, city officials and men of business, the cloth and the Navy gathered at the Bay Harbor last week, with high hopes of finding a permanent location for a USO-type center for service men and women on greater Virginia Beach's oceanfront.

The meeting brought an exchange of ideas, and movements in several directions which could bear fruit. But a consensus seemed to be lacking.

What is called the Hospitality House, located each summer in "temporary" quarters in the city's main resort area, offers enlisted men and women a place to change clothes, store their valuables and have picnics on the lawn--thanks to volunteer efforts.

Mrs. Edward B. Snyder and H. Jack Jennings have formed a Citizens Committee to try and meld community efforts toward finding a permanent Hospitality House, or whatever it might be called.

At last week's meeting, the group accepted a suggestion from State Sen. William P. Kellam to write a letter to Richard J. Webbon, the city's coordinator of urban affairs, and send copies to U.S. Senators William B. Spong Jr. and Harry F. Byrd Jr. and Dist. Rep. Thomas N. Downing.

The purpose is to seek federal aid.

State Sen. Kellam noted the federal government helped provide a Commissioned Officers Club on the oceanfront and said the government should at least provide some land for enlisted personnel.

Maury Riganto, City Recreation Commission chairman, said he believes the federal government has responsibility in the matter. Roger Scott, assistant city manager, suggested a survey of land and old buildings in search of a home for the service center. R. Bradshaw Pulley of the Chamber of Commerce and Mayor Frank A. Dusch pledged their support for the project, previously supported by the local Ministerial Association.

There also was a suggestion that a service club be planned as part of a larger center, taking in such groups as the Y.M.C.A., the Boy Scouts, etc. This is worth study for the long-range future.

But the immediate problem is to find a recreation place for enlisted persons--whether right on the oceanfront or not--for next summer. And it would solve a lot of problems, if some philanthropist with a big heart started a fund with the Virginia Beach Foundation.

Old 'Crabb' Can't Enlighten

Since the wild and woolly surfing lingo is supposed to be the "thing" for real among some of the youngsters in our city, we decided to see if such phrases as "you got to have hair" and "getting bombed" mean anything to our elder elders.

"Crabb's English Synonyms," published way, way back in 1899, was the handiest volume at the moment.

But, unfortunately, that edition didn't even list the words "hair" and "bombed."

We know bombs didn't exist, as they are known today, until relatively recent decades. But for some reason, we thought sure the hairy Smith Brothers quit coughing before the turn of the century.

Now we'll never know what the surfers mean when they talk about nerve, or getting hit by a wave.

Words Worth a Play

Some call it word play, and it goes on every day.

For instance, the new experimental electric car recently publicized by Ford, "Comuta" they call it. Sounds kind of Bauston for "Commuter," in a phonetical way.

Here in greater Virginia Beach, an old word is getting some chuckles.

The word is "Hotel." The Navy shore patrol has been using it as the code word, on its two-way radio system, to identify the colonial-style 3rd Police Precinct in Bay-side Borough. City police manned it this week, the Navy has had two men assigned there for weeks.

Centralized Power

Dear Editor:

One didn't need prophetic vision to understand the human behavior pattern that could be expected to follow after watching the federal government and the Supreme Court deliberately ignore state laws and immobilize all the local police powers.

We are all familiar with the old adage, "Give the base, rude intruder an inch and he'll take a mile." Throughout the ages poor judgement and weak leadership have produced nothing but human misery, but to transform a freedom loving nation into a seething hot-bed of anarchy is a catastrophe too shocking to comprehend.

This is a sample of what happens when the reins of controls are turned over to a runaway, centralized power.

We have a People's Congress of nearly 550 senators and representatives who are pledged to guard and defend the wholesome affairs of our respected people.

Herein lies the hope of our country. Let the good people of our nation get in touch with and keep in touch with their people's Congress.

These are the folks who must defend our freedoms or America will perish.

Ed L. Applegate

Quotes of Local Interest

Hoover on Law Enforcement

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, in an August letter to all law enforcement officers in the country in answer to claims law enforcement is out of touch with reality: "The truth is that law enforcement, by the very nature of its responsibilities, is in much closer touch with the public than are most other professions. The officer on the beat, the patrolman in the cruiser, and the sergeant at the desk know far more about people and what they are thinking than do the sophisticated theorists who issue 'authoritative' appraisals of criminality from within ivory-towered offices."

Rochelle on Children

Carl Rochelle, newscaster on WVEC-TV about 11 p.m. on Saturday night, speaking directly to the TV audience: "In an hour, the day will be over. Do you know where your children are?"

Bateman on World

Herbert H. Bateman, a Tar Heel by birth who recently won a primary election in a House of Delegates race in Newport News, Va., speaking to the Virginia Beach Jaycees at the Black Angus last week: "Our challenge is to see that in a changing world we...play a part in how that world changes."

Morison on Columbus

Samuel Elliot Morison, writing as Columbus might have, in "Admiral of the Ocean Sea," published in 1942: "Rodrigo de Triana, lookout on Pinta's forecastle, sees something like a white sand cliff gleaming in the moonlight on the western horizon, then another, and a dark line of land horizon, then another, and a dark line of land connecting them. 'Tierra! tierra!' he shouts and this time land it is."

Downing on Problems

T.V. Downing, a co-founder of Ruritan National, speaking to a group in Gloucester, Va., last week: "Our form of government was never designed to solve our problems, but to give us a free atmosphere in which to solve our individual and group problems."

Byrd on Laws

U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. in a statement on July 25: "The time has come to enforce the laws and protect the lives and the property of the law abiding citizens of our nation."

Spong on Blame

U.S. Sen. William B. Spong Jr. in a statement on July 28: "I am hopeful that the record in the future will improve, for if we spend our time apportioning blame, all will receive their share and we will be ignoring our major duty and responsibility, which is to find out why the riots occurred and to make sure that they do not happen again."

Romans on Driving

Bill Romans, state Jaycee president and a traffic judge in Lexington, Va., explaining to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN why the Jaycees propose a "Defensive Driving Course" throughout the state: "I believe a high, high majority of the people who drive are not aware of the inherent dangers of just driving an automobile. Failure to obey traffic laws is, to a large extent, the lack of awareness to dangers these laws seek to prevent." (He was at a workshop hosted by the Princess Anne-Bayside Jaycees.)

Sun Report

Consumer Spending 'Stronger' in Va.

Presented in this Sun Report, without interpretation, are excerpts from the latest Virginia Business Index Report, issued by the Bureau of Business Research at the College of William and Mary.

Gilbert C. Jones is bureau director, and the text of the report is as follows:

The first six-month period in 1967, when compared to the same period in 1966, shows a mixed growth pattern for business in Virginia.

Indicators showing gains were retail sales, non-agricultural employment, bank deposits, and postal receipts. However, such indicators as building permits, newspaper advertising lineage, and new car registrations were down in the 1967 to 1966 comparison.

Business in June was highlighted more by what it portends than by what it portrayed, specifically in the areas of retail sales and new car registrations. In comparison to June 1966 figures, retail sales were up better than five percent. This must be considered as a good gain in view of the unseasonably cold weather experienced in the early part of the month.

New car registrations in the June 1967 to June 1966 comparison were down, but there are good indications that new car sales were good in the closing days of the month and continued this pattern into July. These factors combine to provide a good indication that consumer spending in the State is becoming stronger after earlier indications of weakness.

Building permits, or more specifically the availability of mortgage money for private housing, has shown very slight improvement and, as with the figures for the first six months of 1967, was down for the period.

The quick settlement of the strike at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, Virginia's largest private employer, plus good indications of a revival of consumer spending provide good indications of a strong second half for business in Virginia. Also, the introduction of the 1968 models by the auto manufacturers on or about September 15th, the earliest introductory period ever for new cars, should provide some stimulation to that area of the business community. What remains to be seen is the reaction of the consumer to the implementation of the proposed Federal income tax increase, and the effect of the present high cost of borrowing on the availability of mortgage money, which remains in a limited supply, for private housing.

Life and Death Plea

The continuing plea for safety on the highways may be boring to some, but for others it may mean the difference between life and death.

Unfortunately, there will never be enough careful drivers.

The reticence by many drivers to use seat belts and shoulder harnesses seems to be disappearing--a healthy sign.

All new autos have seat or lap belts and the cars coming out in 1968 are expected to also have shoulder harnesses. The Federal government now requires both on their cars and the Secretary of Transportation is expected to require the same requirements on new cars under the Auto Safety Act passed by Congress.

Studies show that last year alone, 12,000 lives could have been saved if everyone used seat belts.

But seat belts, shoulder harnesses and what have you are no substitute for DRIVER JUDGEMENT. According to information compiled by the Governor's Safety Committee, August is the worst month of the year for traffic deaths. With a concerted effort by all of us, we can reverse this trend and make August a happy ending to a safe summer.

Words From A Winner

The 15 hopefuls who've been going through a strenuous period of walking, talking and talent rehearsals in order to cop
the Miss Virginia Beach
title Friday night in the Civic Center, should be encouraged by the message that came from a top winner: Miss America 1967.

Jane Anne Jayroe of Clinton, Okla., who has been wearing the Miss America crown for almost a year now, regards the preliminaries to the Miss America pageant as a well worthwhile experience, even for those who do not win.

As one of the 70,000 girls who competed last year Miss Jayroe said,
"You will develop self-confidence, poise, stage presence and make friends with many outstanding young women.

"Look on this as another educational opportunity. Do your best; learn from everyone you work with. . . . The Committee and your fellow contestants.

"You may win one of the many scholarships awarded or the title that will take you one step closer to the crown of Miss America."

Miss Jayroe will arrive at the Beach Friday morning to participate in the Miss Virginia Beach pageant that night. A luncheon in her honor is planned at the Cavalier Hotel Friday afternoon.

The Virginia Beach
Jaycees, sponsors of the contest urge all residents of the Beach to attend the pageant festivities scheduled to begin at 8 p.m.

10. At EXPO-67, you never have to wait in line for exhibit.
— true — false.

Answers

6. The correct answers to questions 6 are (a), (c) and (e).
7. If you checked false for question #7, you would be precisely wrong. The three types of classification are: European (no meals included), Modified American (breakfast and lunch), and American (all three meals).
8. B is the correct answer to question #8. This fee is for six nights in a hotel under the Modified American plan and also a round-trip air ticket for two, since there are usually two people on a honeymoon.
9. True is the answer for question #9. Ship and plane fare

She is now a Beach resident and tells, in her own words, this hitherto unpublished story of her experiences in war-torn Europe.

In previous installments, Mary told of the events that led to their arrest.

Arthur was a member of a small band of saboteurs who, in attempting to derail a train, was spotted by the German guards. Shots were exchanged; one German guard was killed. Mary and Arthur fled, hoping to make their way from France to England. They were in hiding in the home of his grandfather but they were, nonetheless, trailed, found, arrested and imprisoned.

The fourth installment follows.

I told the girls that I called Arthur Chou. We talked for a while but the Germans shouted for us to be quiet.

I opened my table and made up my bed. I soon heard the sound of boots again and hid my head under the cover. They went by my cell. What a relief. I fell asleep praying and hoping that my family had received word of our arrest.

At five the next morning, I heard the bell going off to waken the prisoners. We had coffee and a little piece of bread. I made my bed, and waited. Time went by very slowly but finally my door opened and the officer standing there said, You are going to Belgium. Get ready.

I got ready and left without saying goodbye to my friends.
Yes, my friends, for anyone in prison is a friend, even if you only know them for one hour.

I was thinking of Arthur and wondering if we would be making the trip together. It all seemed like a nightmare, but it was real.

I saw Arthur standing there.
He looked pitiful but smiled and asked me how I felt. He had to turn away for tears came to his eyes.

Shortly the German said,
Turn around both of you. You are going back to your cell.
We didn't leave that day after all; why we never found out.
I waved goodbye to Arthur, he waved back and gave me a big smile. I thought, what a long day ahead and what will they do with us?

I had several talks with the girls and found out that Anna had gone free. In the afternoon
I was allowed to go for a walk a few times around a circle.

That was the shortest walk I ever had.

The girls said they had walked past the men's prison and had called Chou, Chou, several times and Arthur had answered and said he was all right.

The next day we left. We were taken to the railroad station where three more soldiers were waiting for us. That made seven soldiers for two prisoners.

In the train, we were not permitted to sit together. Our eyes talked. As long as we could see each other we were satisfied. We passed the French border and from there were entering little Belgium towns . .

towns that reminded us of something we had done there in our underground work.

Soon we approached the town where Arthur had been living.
Will anyone see us and what will be Arthur's reaction? Yes, we got to Louisa . . . that is where he was born and had spent all his life. Maybe this is the last time he will ever see it again. Several people got on the train . . . one was a woman we knew and she knew

(See A Woman's Page 7)

A page from Mary's scrapbook contains an order for her arrest (top) and a poem she composed while in prison. Above the arrest order Mary had written, "Gestapo arrested Uncle July 5, 1942 - they returned July 8 to arrest me. I had escaped. This was then mailed to our home."

Human Growth Group To Meet Here Sat.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Blosser who recently took up the cause of the retarded-growth child, will be hosts to some 40 members of the Mid-Atlantic Chapter of Human Growth Inc. in their home here Saturday.

The Blossers, whose interest in the plight of the dwarfed child prompted them to join the national organization, will meet with doctors, advisors and parents of affected children in their Willow Drive home to outline future plans for expansion and development of the two-year old organization.

Blosser is vice president of the Mid-Atlantic chapter which encompasses the entire southern territory. The group is dedicated to the task of bringing dwarfism to the attention of the public, not only to help those with afflicted children, but to provide funds for research and development of a program aimed at stocking the national pituitary bank with the glands needed to help cure dwarfed children, estimated to number at least 10,000 in our country alone.

To date, only 350 children have been able to receive treatment because of the shortage of the glands.

It is the first time the group has met here. President of the Mid-Atlantic Chapter is James E. Robinson Jr. of Fries, Va.

Joan Gimbert Engaged

Joan Marie Gimbert of this city and Peter John Walker of Syracuse, N.Y., will marry here Oct. 7.

Announcement of their engagement has been made by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude R. Gimbert. Mr. Walker is the son of Mrs. Elbridge Walker of this city and the late Col. Walker of Wayne, Pa.

Miss Gimbert is a graduate of Princess Ann High School. She is employed with National Airlines at their airport office.

Mr. Walker is a graduate of Dartmouth College.

The couple will be married in Galilee Episcopal Church.

GCV Board Meet Held In Byrd Home

Mrs. M.F. Fogler of 7912 Oceanfront, a director-at-large, attended the mid-summer meeting of the Board of Directors of the Garden Club of Virginia last Friday at Berryville.

The meeting was held in Rosemont, home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Byrd. Mrs. Byrd, hostess for the meeting, is parliamentary and editor of the GCV Register printed each fall.

The 18 board members from various sections of the state met for a 10 a.m. meeting and luncheon.

Two new board members attended. They are Mrs. J. Pemberton Penn Jr. of the Garden Club of Danville, and Mrs. Charles Wesley Feebles Jr. of the Brunswick Garden Club Lawrenceville. They will serve three years.

They succeed Mrs. Stuart G. Christian Jr. of the Gabriella Garden Club, Danville, and Mrs. H. Ashby Rawls of the Franklin Garden Club, whose terms have expired.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Parrott of Roanoke is president of the state-wide group.

Views on Arts Center Aired To Steven

The ambitious plans of a new-formed group who see the Beach as a site for a Fine Arts Cultural Center were aired publicly at a meeting last week in the First Presbyterian Church on Pacific Avenue.

Russell Stanger, conductor of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra around which the center, hopefully, will progress, appeared before the group to present his ideas and suggestions to those behind the music-for-the-beach movement.

Among those people is Mrs. John W. Musick, president of the newly-organized Virginia Beach Friends of Music, Inc. Mrs. Musick presented the by-laws and outlined plans for the creation of a fine arts coordinating committee to meet with other arts-related groups here at the Beach.

Mrs. Musick said, "I would like very much to be able to work with the other groups and to build a summer music festival with the Norfolk Symphony as our main attraction. We must determine what the people want and are willing to work for."

Though the proposed center would be a year-round activity, Stanger stressed the appeal of a strong summer program. He envisions it as an open-to-all festival and a center with a music school, an art colony, a ballet theater, a festival hall and work shops. He referred to the planned project as the Virginia Beach Music and Arts Center, a "name I hope will be used."

There should be a student department, a chamber music department and an opera department, Stanger said.

"There is no reason that it cannot be done," he said, but cautioned the group to work toward their goal slowly and unselfishly.

Speaking for the Norfolk Symphony, Stanger said, "It is a great honor to be taking part in this movement."

The first order of business for the 54-member group is a series of concerts to be presented this fall and winter in Princess Anne High School.

Mrs. Leonard Streiff presented the plan for the winter series, saying, "We would like to expose as many people as possible to music. Many, for one reason or the other, have not heard the Norfolk Symphony. We plan to offer it to all."

The three concerts scheduled are: Oct. 19 with the Norfolk Symphony; Jan. 25 with the Feldman Chamber Music Society; and March 21, the Norfolk Little Symphony.

Future plans for the Friends of Music include organization of committees to approach the area's various arts-related groups with suggestions and interest.

Stanger said, "I've expressed my goals. It's now up to you to set yours."

Travelers
Mrs. William V. Barber of the Mayflower Apartments left Wednesday, July 12, for a European holiday. She sailed from New York aboard the United States, planning to return later this summer on the Nieuw Amsterdam.

Capt. Peter Hinkamp, USN, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Clarence Hinkamp of North Bay Shore Drive, who is recovering from a recent operation.

A Woman's Story

us.... but knew we were prisoners.

The train pulled out and after it was underway, the woman came to our drawing room and offered us something to eat. A German threw her out.

A few minutes later she came back and said all she wanted to do was to give us some of her food. One soldier looked at the other and at last they let her give us the food. As soon as she left, the food was taken from us and the German officer gave orders to have her followed. We later received word that she had been sitting her boy in prison and that he was executed the day we met her on the train.

We passed the place where we had pulled the last job and Arthur's eyes caught mine.

Through Pipeline Flows Friendship

Maybe for this place we would pay with our lives. The Germans were saying the same thing.

We arrived in Ath and a car was waiting for us. We stopped briefly at Gestapo headquarters in Ath but then were taken to our place of destination. It was a big building that looked much better than the prison in France. Tall walls were around the building and a small door entered from the street. We then went through a large door to a hall. All our belongings were taken away from us. I had to give them my rings and watch. We got a small aluminum dish and a blanket; that's all. I looked at Arthur and we kissed. It was a kiss full of faith. It was also the last kiss.

We were separated again and I was assigned to a cell. I looked to see Arthur but already he was gone.

Once again in a cell... but this one was brighter and cleaner than the other. I had one table, a chair, a basin and a pail. At least we had running water.

The Germans gave me my instructions. I had to get up at 5 a.m., make my bed, clean my cell, and have my pan ready so that I can get some coffee. The pail served for all purposes and we had to be sure we had it ready by 5 a.m. We would just put the pail near the door. It would be emptied by one of the prisoners. To do that job, these prisoners had to have a sack covering their head so that they couldn't be recognized or couldn't see anything.

I would have to take a walk every day for 10 minutes in the morning... all by myself. I would have supper... if I was in my cell... not that I could go out but if I were at the interrogator's I would lose my supper. At 7 everyone is to get in bed... and no one is to be down during the day. We were not to try to talk to any of the guards or make any attempt to watch the soldiers.

After all these instructions I was wondering if it was worth living any longer, but all the time these words came to my mind... words spoken by my grandfather Theophile when he came back from being a prisoner.

Buttermilk is just buttermilk... unless it's

Then you know it's Quality Check!

er in 1916; As long as there is life there is hope... so maybe there was hope for Arthur and me.

I looked around after the German left me, and for the first time I could kneel down and say a prayer.

Pretty soon I heard some knocking on the wall... and went towards the corner of my cell. I heard a girl call 360. That was my cell number. She seemed to shout. Wasn't she scared the Germans would hear her? I pressed my ear against the wall and said, I am scared to talk so loud, and I could hear myself over the whole prison. But she told me to press my ear against the heating pipe and to keep my hand in front of my mouth. I did and I could hear them talking very plainly.

They asked me who I was and I gave them a false name. I still can't trust anyone at that time.

I tried to find out if anyone was there from Tournai (that is the city next to Arthur's). Some of them were. I asked if anyone was from Renix (my home town). All of a sudden I heard someone saying Mary! It was no one else but Arthur's mother! Why was she here? What had become of the Libre family? I got tears in my eyes and said, Yes, Ma, it is me.

She couldn't talk any more for she also knew that maybe this would be the end of her son. She was sobbing and I tried my best to encourage her, but words were stuck in my throat. We talked for quite some time, and although she was quite far from my cell, I wasn't scared and felt she could protect me.

For a while everything was very still in the prison for a Priest who was also a prisoner was saying Mass and we were all praying.

My name became Kiki. Everyone had a different sound on the pipe to be called. And all different names so that the Germans if they were listening wouldn't know who was talking or where the messages came from.

That night I couldn't sleep for I had learned also that my uncle and brother had been arrested. One of Arthur's brothers was arrested too but had escaped from the train. His youngest brother was captured and his father was on the run. The whole family was in trouble but worst of all Arthur was known as a saboteur.

I was wondering where my mother was but Arthur's mother said she was here for a short while but she thought they'd let her go because she was brought here in an ambulance.

I tried to sleep but I couldn't.

Church Looks To Youth

Mrs. Harold Goranson, who recently returned from the Ecumenical Assembly of Churchwomen United's convention, feels that "hope lies in the young people—they have to be the agents of change in the church."

Mrs. Goranson, who lives on Bruton Lane, is vice-president of the Virginia Beach Council of Churchwomen United. She represented the group at the assembly.

The theme of the assembly, which held July 13 to 16 at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., was divided into four categories: communication with young people, racial relations, sex education, and world peace.

A panel discussion with young leaders (under 25) from all walks of life revealed that they felt the church was dying because the younger generation was not interested in it. Mrs. Goranson agreed. "They aren't taking over because of what we have taught them and I don't blame them."

One of the panelists was a Negro girl who had a "vast knowledge of the Chicago slums." She surmised the feelings of many of her friends by saying, "Negroes don't want white people deciding for them what they want."

The high point of the convention, in Mrs. Goranson's opinion, were the lectures by Malcolm Boyd, an Episcopal Minister-at-Large to students. Unable to attend the assembly, he spoke to the conventioners via radio. Rev. Boyd said that the United States is "in as much need of missionary work as any other country in the world. People are worshipping religion instead of God. There is more Christianity from Jews and atheists than from front pew churchmen. The church must die before it has a revolution." Mrs. Goranson adds, "people are afraid to reinterpret the Bible."

Application of the knowledge gained from the assembly, she said, hopefully will be introduced in living room dialogues all over the world—"to understand our neighbors, to understand the church and to learn more about religion. It is a matter of the heart, a change in attitude. This will not be a debate, but an exchange of ideas."

Mrs. Goranson, who will undertake this project under the auspices of Christian Causeways, plans to have a Catholic, a Jew, a Negro, Protestants and anyone else who has a different point of view on his religion meet to discuss problems and air their views. Rev. Boyd summed up the know-your-neighbors idea with the statement, "there is a need of leadership in that which covers a five block area."

Beautification Commission Beach Litter Laws: Enforce or Ignore?

Persuasion rather than enforcement and color rather than clutter were recommended to members of the city's Beautification Commission as tactics to be used in their war against litter.

Richard J. Webbon, coordinator of Urban Affairs for the city, replying to members' insistence that the city enforce the law which carries a fine of $25 for littering, said it is a difficult problem for police to arrest people on vacation.

"Many of the offenders are tourists and we certainly don't want to drive people away. Enforcement of the law should be a last resort."

Webbon suggested that members give some thought to a city-wide distribution of litter bags, possibly by police and Jaycees, urging vacationers to help keep the city clean. The bags could be hung on car handles, particularly on those cars bearing out of city license tags.

The Beautification Commission met Tuesday last week in the Convention Center, E.S. Ruffin Jr., president, conducted the meeting.

Herbert L. Smith, a Commission vice president, speaking on a suggestion made by Mrs. Fielding Jeter that the city metal signs be placed on the Beach itself urging people to use the containers placed there for trash, said that the city already is overburdened with signs.

"Why not use the cans themselves as signboards rather than erect more?"

"There are approximately 300 cans on the oceanfront now. Why not call attention to them by painting them bright, almost garish, colors. If you want, paint them all different colors, but brighten them and come up with a catchy phrase that you could, if you want, paint on the cans to encourage people to use them."

Webbon and Smith were among several who spoke at the meeting of the litter-minded group whose constant war against city-wide ugliness has, to date, resulted in little more than a sporadic clean-up campaigns and those, generally, by the Commission members themselves.

Mrs. Lawrence Tucker, long a crusader for a litter-free city, voiced discouragement at the city's failure to arrest offenders.

"We were successful in having City Council reduce the fine from the unrealistic figure of $500 to $25. But still, arrests are not being made."

Mrs. Tucker read from an Orange, Va., newspaper, an article naming persons who had been arrested and fined $500 for violating that city's litter laws.

"I don't see why it can't be done here," Mrs. Tucker added.

Continuing, she called attention to hamburger drive-ins, the worst offenders, she felt, in the city.

"These places are making so much money that they should be made to hire men on a fulltime basis to pick up the litter and trash that surround these places, constantly."

J. Malcolm Firth of the 3600 block of Holly Road, reading from prepared notes, cited six reasons why he thinks the city should take a long, hard look at the problem of litter.

"There should be more stringent enforcement by the police department. Rumor has it that the judge hearing the cases lets the offenders off with a reprimand, and yet the Garden Club has gone to some expense and trouble placing signs on the highways quote: 'Unlawful to throw trash on the highways. Fines up to $25 unquote.

"City government is not strict enough about cleaning up the litter. For example, look at 32nd Street from the Post Office to Pacific Avenue. The Garden Club went to the expense of putting shrubs on both sides of the street. Bottles, cans and paper in profusion lie between the plants.

"The city, I understand, has a law compelling every owner of a garbage can to have a top to his container. Just take a walk around the neighborhood and see how this is enforced. When the wind blows and the container is full, what happens to the trash?"

"City pride should be a factor in everyone's life in a community. In my opinion, even if a man be the head of the largest business in the area, it is his obligation as a citizen of Virginia Beach to keep his domain clean. If anyone thinks it is beneath his dignity to lean down and pick up litter, he can very readily hire someone to do this for him.

"Vacant property should receive attention as well. There is no law in Virginia Beach to compel an owner to keep his property clean. The city should enact such a law and if the owner will not keep his domain clean, the city should have it done and send him the bill. Other cities have such laws.

"I claim a department of litter or cleanliness or whatever you might call it should be started here at Virginia Beach with paid employees to carry it out. If the city can spend $90,000 to erect a marina to house a few yachts, money for parks and $38,000 for dredge that has been lying idle these many months, it can spend a few thousand dollars a year in trying to keep the city of Virginia Beach free of litter."

Continuing, Firth said, "There are many other items that could be enforced such as machinery to keep the beach clean after the life guards have gone off duty.

"Why use antiquated methods to clean up the streets. A broom, a shovel, and a can are not sufficient in these modern times. Why not have proper machinery to do it, as other modern cities are doing?"

"The city is most anxious to have an influx of tourists. Don't discourage them by maintaining a dirty beach."

This machinery, Webbon explained, is extremely expensive equipment.

"We have 40 miles of oceanfront. Even six machines working 24 hours a day couldn't cover all of it. The problem would be where to use it."

Lt. C. H. Payne of 2nd Precinct, represented the Police Department at the meeting.

Asked by Firth whether a report made by him (Firth) to the police identifying by license number a car from which he had seen trash being thrown would receive action by the department, Payne replied that unless Firth could absolutely identify the person throwing the trash, it probably would not. "You must identify the offender personally. A warrant must be served on a person, not a car."

Garbage May Have New Use

Tennis in the garbage dump? It's a possibility, judging from comments at the Parks and Recreation commission meeting at the end of July.

Under discussion was a proposal to build a tennis court, with about 5,000 seats, for holding final matches of major tennis tournaments.

Chairman Maury Riganto asked R. E. Dorer in charge of the federally-supported garbage disposal project in which garbage is built into mounds, covered with dirt and put to useful purposes, if a court could be constructed in one of the "garbage pits."

"I hate to call it that, but that's what it is," said Riganto. Dorer replied that he had not considered the idea before, but it might be possible. An amphitheater has already been suggested for the disposal area.

Riganto said that someday he would like to see Virginia Beach become the "capitol of tennis in the South."

Harold Whitehurst, director of the Department of Parks and Recreation, said, "I think we've taken some giant steps, and I hope we'll take more."

In other business, Whitehurst announced there will be school principals' tour of city recreation facilities on Aug. 15. It is open to all public school principals in greater Virginia Beach. A time has not been set.

Riganto said 12,768 cars parked in the lot at Littlefield Park south of Sandbridge, from July 1 through 23 and parking fees. A fee of 25 cents a day is charged. Riganto pointed out that three attendants are paid from the fees.

Riganto said police had reported fewer surfing violations since the surfing rules had been printed and distributed.

Commission members voted to send a committee (to be appointed later), to go to Westport, Conn., and study its park and recreation program.

Contrasts Amaze Local Boy in S.A.

By Bob Wooldridge

Guayaquil is a city of extremes—a luxurious paradise for the wealthy and elite, a strong challenge facing even the sturdiest and most dedicated Peace Corps volunteer; a dream come true for the luckier ones, a nightmare in reality for the unfortunate.

The beauty of the city lies in its parks, monuments, waterways, country clubs, and ornate suburban homes. Most of these homes, usually two stories and lacking a yard of mentionable size, are surrounded by walls of shrubs and flowers. Inside are marble floors, chandeliers, and often an indoor patio.

With the Quayaquil Yacht Club, Quayaquil Tennis Club (the scene of the recent United States - Ecuador Davis Cup matches), and Club Nacional dominating the social scene, the main sports events are found at the Tennis Club, Coliseo Cerrado, and Estadio (Stadium) Modelo. Although there are many modern buildings, few surpass the towering monuments in flowery parks and the gigantic cathedrals. The latest in the theater and shopping elegance is also present.

Yet in Guayaquil, the people living in wealth and ease are exceptions to the rule. Most of the city is consumed by intense filth and poverty.

Roads, in poor enough condition as it is, are often impassable with the garbage and debris thrown out front doors at will. Disgusting...deplorable...disheartening...shocking...yes, all of these and much more. The slums that make up most of the city are worsened by the fact that only a block away, or often even next door, people are living a life of comfort and luxury.

The weather here certainly surprised me. Expecting a tropical climate after a quick glance at the map, I was disappointed to find their summers cool and their winters hot. In the present season, a sweater is often needed in the morning, but by afternoon it's warm enough for a swim.

Though primarily Catholic, Guayaquil does have a few Protestant Churches. The first Protestant missionaries came in 1896 from the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church. I had the pleasure of meeting one of the two men who arrived that year and, at age ninety-three is still very active in the Seminary and the Church.

Most of the schools are small, private, Catholic, and non-co-educational. For me, at Colegio Espiritu Santo, school begins at 7:30 a.m. and ends at 1:45 p.m. The daily schedule, with subjects relatively the same as ours, consist of seven classes, each forty-five minutes in length, and there are two half-hour breaks in the morning.

Naturally, the teenage dancing, as well as the dating customs, differs from that of the United States. The rule for dancing is at least a foot apart, and dates as we know them are very uncommon.

With experiences as diverse as kicking myself to death in my first attempts at soccer, and learning the beds, desks, and buses are too small for me, this past month has been amusing as well as enlightening.

I find it easier each day to laugh at my blunders in customs and language, especially after I hear my friends practice English.

Billy Never Blows His Cool

He has been reading since he was two and banging out rhythm on his high chair for "as long as I can remember," says Mrs. M.C. Shearin of her son, Billy.

Billy, who will be eight Aug. 19, "sounds better on the drums than some professionals I've heard," says James Ackles, supervisor of music education for the City of Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Shearin is "proud of talent that any of her five children have shown. I hope he becomes a music teacher or plays in a nice orchestra. I don't like rock and roll too much." Billy likes anything with a beat, and his practicing doesn't bother the Shearin household. "The only thing that does bother me is when the other children start playing the drums. It gets kind of noisy."

Billy will enter fourth grade at Lynnhaven Elementary School in the fall.

"He is an average, well-rounded boy," comments Mrs. Shearin. "He swims and plays like other boys in his spare time. He likes to read encyclopedias and make reports on holidays for his teachers, but he doesn't always stick to the books. He is definitely not a bookworm."

Billy is presently taking drum lessons from Jerry Cole, who says rhythm "just comes naturally to him." Although Billy has only been taking lessons since February, he has played on his small drum set long before then. According to Mrs. Shearin, "he has always had rhythm."

And the beat goes on.

Billy Shearin in Action

At a recent convocation of city band directors and students at Princess Anne High School, Billy, never blowing his cool pounded the skins in front of an audience of about 50, who stood in silence until he finished. Then came the roar of applause.

TV Newsman Griffin Says Philosophy Led to WTAR Split

It was a "disagreement over the basic philosophy for continued operation of the newsroom" which led to John R. Griffin's recent departure from WTAR-TV and Radio, according to Griffin.

The sudden announcement of the local man's departure from the post of news and public affairs director at the area stations July 21, 1967, stirred speculation and posed a mystery in communication and business circles.

When he returned last weekend from a stay at Nags Head, N. C., the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN interviewed Griffin at his Mistle Place home in Lynwood here.

Griffin, 33, said he had a series of discussions with Lee C. Kitchin, recently named president of the Norfolk-based stations, and both agreed "the changes that were necessary for the best interest of the newsroom could not be made as long as I was the director."

Asked about the disagreement on philosophy, Griffin would say only that it involved "the morale of various members of the staff, from discipline to opportunities."

He said, "The company suggested that I consider several other positions with the station, and I chose not to take any of them."

Asked about his present plans for employment, Griffin said he is discussing two possible jobs with the CBS television network, one with CBS owned, and operated stations in Washington and another with WCBN in New York.

"Despite the financial rewards of those positions," he said, "I would turn them down for a while."

When interviewed by the SUN, Griffin was planning to go to Puerto Rico this week Thursday, while job opportunities became clearer.

He went with WTAR as a newsman in 1958, when he graduated from the University of North Carolina. After three years with WTAR, he studied under a CBS Fellowship at Columbia University.

2,000 Jump In Schools enrollment for Virginia Beach public schools for the 1967-68 school year is expected to be nearly 2,000 more than last year.

The expected enrollment is 38,500--25,000 in elementary schools and 13,000 for secondary schools, according to E.E. Brickell, supervisor of secondary education in the public schools.

This is 1,911 more than last year's total of 36,589 in early September. That total was 1,789 more than 1965-66 student enrollment.

Va. Beach G.I. Retains Humor 'Over There'

America's fighting men in Vietnam are keeping their sense of humor, judging from a mimeographed letter which Kenneth L. Baum of Virginia Beach sent home last week.

Mrs. R.C. Coughlin of Dermott Avenue in Bayside Borough received a "Notice of Return" from Kenneth, her son, as he waited at Cu Chi, Vietnam, for "port call. It mixes fact and fiction.

"Humor him upon his return as he may seem a little strange. Be sure to lock him up at the first sign of rain, as he might grab his soap and run nude into the front yard," the notice said, "this being the only way to shower in Vietnam."

"Don't think him crazy if he sends someone into a bar to get his beer and bring it out to him while he stands guard, for during his few trips to Saigon this was SOP (Standard Operating Procedure). The VC had a bad habit of throwing things into bars that weren't guarded."

The notice continued in part:

"Don't allow any sudden loud noises around him, as he might grab a broom thinking it is his M-14 and jump into the nearest ditch, this being the normal action to take during a mortar attack at Cu Chi...."

"Don't get angry if he starts poking around the flower bed and digging up the front yard. He is just checking for booby traps and land mines. These were plentiful items in Vietnam...."

(See G.I. Humor, Page 3.)

Norfolk Eyed Future With Merger Proposal

A state development report released to the press last week gives an indication of why Norfolk Mayor Roy B. Martin Jr. recently proposed a merger between Norfolk and greater Virginia Beach.

The merger proposal popped into public during the recent Democratic primary campaign in July, and Virginia Beach city officials rejected it at the time.

Close to 80 per cent of the population growth south of Hampton Roads in this decade of the 1960's is taking place in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, according to state officials.

The Virginia Division of Planning, in a report previously unpublicized locally, said the "majority" of large undeveloped areas of land in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area is in greater Virginia Beach.

After Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, "Most of the remaining population growth will be accounted for by the City of Norfolk," the state office said. Virginia Beach has 258.7 square miles of land.

Using U. S. Census counts and population estimates from the University of Virginia, state officials project the Virginia Beach population at 175,237 by 1970.

Fitzhugh Newsome, economist with the Virginia Beach Planning Commission, has made higher projections, figuring the present local population is near 160,000, including migration out of Norfolk.

Newsome projects the city's population to 215,000 by 1970, to 302,595 by 1975, to 380,000 by 1980 and to 451,411 by 1985.

A top official at the University of Virginia's bureau of Population and Economic Research has said in the past that its population estimates are "conservative" for Virginia Beach because the formula used does not take into account migration between Norfolk and Virginia Beach, or the local increase in trailer-dwelling families.

Of population growth from 1965 to 1970, in the area comprising Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Nansemond County, the state report said:

Virginia Beach will get 56 per cent of the anticipated growth, Chesapeake will get 22 per cent, Norfolk 4 per cent, Nansemond County 4 per cent and Portsmouth 3 per cent.

"Virginia Beach is expected to increase its share of the area's population from 18 to 22 percent and Chesapeake from 13 to 14 percent, while Norfolk drops from 46 to 43 per cent and Portsmouth from 17 to 15 per cent and Suffolk and Nansemond stay at about the same proportions," the report added.

Other highlights in the report by the Virginia Division of Planning, after a detailed study of the metropolitan area south of Hampton Roads, include:

"Of the 'absolute growth' in population since 1950, about 55.5 per cent was in what is now Virginia Beach.

"Virginia Beach had a 34.2 per cent rate of natural increase (births minus deaths), for the highest in the area from 1950 to 1960.

"The net migration rate for Virginia Beach was 116 per cent during that period, highest in the area; as Norfolk and Portsmouth had minus rates, (The net civilian migration rate here was 105.5 per cent, also highest in the area.)

"From 1960 to 1965, the 'natural increase' in Virginia Beach was 15 per cent, highest in the area, and the net migration rate was 29 per cent, highest in the area.

Of 28,000 "resident workers" in Virginia Beach who resided in the area, two-thirds of them listed their employment within Virginia Beach. Less than one-third reported they worked in Norfolk.

The state report projects total federal employment in the area at 105,000 by 1970, with the military stabilizing near 75,000 and civilians at 30,000. (Those figures do not include military personnel at sea.

The report does not break down federal employment for each of the communities south of Hampton Roads.

Dr. Bowman Gets State Appointment

Gov. Mills E. Godwin has picked a 36-year-old oral surgeon from Virginia Beach to succeed Dr. Ira L. Hancock, another local man, on the State Hospital Board.

Godwin recently appointed Dr. John L. Bowman Jr., a native of Roanoke now living in the Kings Grant area, to the state group. Dr. Hancock of Creeds recently retired from the board after 11 years of service.

Bowman attended Jefferson High in Roanoke and graduated from Woodbury Forest, a prep school, before going to the dental school at Medical College of Virginia. He later finished his residency in oral surgery there in 1964 and moved to Virginia Beach.

He has an office at Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center. He and his wife, the former Jean Allen of Roanoke, live on Winchester Lane. They have two children, Imrie, 10 and Lydia, 2.

Rudee Inlet Jetties Started

After more than seven years of planning and setbacks in financing and court fights, the construction of jetties to open Rudee Inlet on the Atlantic seaboard here is under way. A major sports boating center is virtually assured inside the inlet in a year or two.

The George T. McLean Co. and W. F. Magann Corp., contractors in the joint venture, began building a "beach road" for trucks with mats and small stone last week, between the Lighthouse Restaurant and the Steel Fishing Pier on greater Virginia Beach's oceanfront.

They have a $608,000 contract.

The road was completed by this week so footing work could begin on a new north jetty. It will extend seaward 880 feet and be capped with stones weighing 7 to 10 tons.

A small pier is being constructed south of the inlet to serve as the platform for a pile-driving crane, which will build a groin.

The timber groin is designed as part of a sand trap south of the inlet. At the ocean end of the 562-foot-long groin will be a south jetty, canted in a northeast direction for 285 feet.

The caps of the jetties will be 15 feet above the ocean bottom at low water. Between them will be a channel 10 feet deep (mean low water) and 88 feet wide at the bottom, extending to Lake Rudee inside a high-level bridge recently opened for General Booth Boulevard. It eventually will tie into a new highway south along the seaboard to near Nags Head, N. C.

The location of the inlet, scheduled to open to boat traffic by next spring, has virtually the same relation to the city's main boardwalk resort area as the fishing-boat inlet at Ocean City, Md. It is a few blocks south of the boardwalk here.

Langley, McDonald and Overman are consulting engineers for the inlet project. L. Dean Curtis is directing the work for the city government and the advisory Rudee Inlet Authority, headed by Frank W. Kellam.

When the inlet is opened next spring, it will be the only oceanfront one on the Atlantic seaboard between Chesapeake Bay and Oregon Inlet in North Carolina.

First Research Corporation of Miami, Fla., found the inlet project and a planned marina for sports fishing craft finan-

Building Pace Over '66

City building permits issued in Virginia Beach during July pushed cumulative totals on permits and values over the 1966 level for the first time this year, according to John Gibbs, city building official. Residential construction led during the month.

A report released by Gibbs listed July permits at 274 and values placed on the buildings and other structures at $5.3 million. Federal construction is not included.

The July report put the value total for the first seven months of 1967 at $26,834,373, slightly ahead of last year's $26,808,201, according to the report. Presumably rising building costs had some effect on value figures this year.

However, the number of permits through July of this year totaled 1,830, according to Gibbs. This was slightly ahead of the 1966 figure of 1,755 by the same time reflecting increased construction activity this year.

A July breakdown released by Gibbs listed single-family residence permits at 155, with values of $2,819,552; 12 permits for dwellings with two or more family units, (70 units total), valued at $894,924, and 12 permits for new commercial jobs valued at $693,740.

The report also listed 59 single-residence additions (values $102,432); 20 garage and utility buildings (values $20,705); 5 commercial additions (values $27,900), 8 churches and other public buildings (values $318,100) and 23 structures other than actual buildings (values $528,760).

Auxiliary Tests Pre-Schoolers' Eyes

By Susan Axelrod

A little boy stood against a chair and stated, "that's a doll baby, and that's a key. Now do I pass? I didn't even cry."

This was just one of many reactions to the recent Volunteers for Vision sight testing program.

Volunteers for Vision is a national organization, sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Optometric Association. The clinic's testing has been officially sanctioned by the Office of Economic Opportunity in the nation's capital, and is incorporated with the Headstart program.

Locally, Volunteers for Vision has been "screening" some 375 Headstart youngsters. "Screening" is a visual testing program, in which a trained worker and her helpers try to detect visual problems in pre-schoolers.

The trained worker is a local member of an Optometric Auxiliary. Other workers are members of the Volunteer Service Bureau and interested area housewives.

Mrs. Howard Kahn is the Volunteers for Vision representative who recently held "screening" sessions at W.T. Cooke Elementary School.

The testing is divided into five parts, professionally referred to as: external appearance of eyes, identification, motilities, eye alignment and peripheral orientations.

In checking the external appearance of the eyes, the trained worker, Mrs. Kahn, looks for visible eye afflictions. For Mrs. Kahn's experienced eye it takes about as much time as it takes for her to say, "come here and let me see how many eyes you've got." Then she has the children follow a penlight flash light with their eyes.

Next the Headstarters stand 10 feet away from a bulletin board and identify such objects as a clothespin, a doll, a bracelet, a key or a spoon.

The next test, eye alignment, is an individual evaluation of the eyes.

For the finale, the child is placed about eight feet from a volunteer who holds an object. The child is told to walk towards the girl and object.

As a second part of this last testing division, the child is told to walk and stop when he reaches a certain object placed on his side on the floor.

If any defects are found, the Headstart child is taken to an optometrist for a more detailed study to diagnose the problem.

Supt. Reed with Two Playful 'Orphans'.

Pets at Bureau Await Adoption

By Carolyn McAllen
Sun Writer

"I'd have kept them myself, but we have dogs," the farmer said almost apologetically, holding a box containing three small gray kittens, their eyes barely open.

"This isn't the first time," he said. "I've kept some of them." He found the kittens abandoned along the road in front of his house.

The scene was the Bureau of Animal Control. The three kittens were placed in a pen with a mother cat who already had three kittens almost the same size as the "orphans." She showed no alarm and accepted them as her own.

"I wish people would learn to bring their puppies and kittens to us instead of just turning them loose somewhere," commented Russell Reed, Superintendent of the Bureau of Animal Control.

Reed admitted that the location of the bureau might make it difficult for people not only to bring in animals but also to adopt them. "They just don't know we're here," he said.

The bureau is located south of Bonney Road near the city's garbage dump. Two new signs were to be erected, the main one on Bonney Road.

"We have 50 to 60 animals at all times," said Reed. "I've seen the number go as high as 100. It never drops below 25."

Dogs may be adopted for $5. Cats are given away. Dogs are confined for five days to give owners a chance to claim them.

Reed said the bureau's biggest problem in summer is dog bites. He said 140 to 180 bites a month are reported, including minor scratches.

"The majority of those bitten are children riding bicycles," Reed said. "We see a big drop in bites as soon as school starts in the fall."

Complaints (which total about 600 a month) range from barking dogs to pigeons on roofs. Reed said barking dogs are a "civil matter over which we have no control."

One day, according to Reed, a woman called to report a lost turtle—lost in the trunk of her car, that is. Her son had placed it in the car several days before, then it disappeared.

appeared. The odor indicated it was hidden in the trunk. Reed discovered it in the insulation around the door.

"At least the woman got her son to remove the remains," he said.

Reed said he hoped to begin a door-to-door check of dog licenses this fall.

"Some people think that if they keep their dogs in their own yards, they don't have to have licenses. This just isn't so."

He added that there have been fewer licenses sold so far this year than in the same period in 1966. "And I know there are more dogs," he said.

Licenses are sold for two dollars for one year, the license year starting January 1. Proof of rabies inoculation is required.

Neither dogs nor cats should run at large in Virginia Beach, according to city laws. But they do.

"Most people don't know the laws about cats. Besides, it's almost impossible to enforce," Reed said.

In addition to dogs and cats, the animal control bureau keeps a "barnyard" for a variety of other animals.

Present residents include two pigs, some ducks, chickens and a sun-burned rooster. Food for such "guests" is bought by the bureau employees. At other times there have been horses, sheep and goats there.

The bureau has four wardens, a dispatcher and two laborers. They have four trucks, plus a jeep for patrolling the city's miles of beaches.

Many calls have come into my office in the last week concerning bagworms. This is a pest that is becoming quite noticeable on many of the needle-leaf evergreens such as juniper, arborvitae and cedar. It now appears as a brownish cocoon with bits of the leaves woven into the cocoon wall. Usually they will be about an inch to an inch and one half long. At the present time, the female bagworm is in the cocoon laying eggs for the next generation of bagworms which will hatch next spring in the first part of June. She will later leave the cocoon and disappear into the ground.

There is nothing that can be done to control bagworms at this time of the season, EXCEPT to pick the bags off your plants and destroy them. This is one of the most effective ways to rid your plants of this pest next year. To prevent re-infestation next year, spray around June 10, using either of the following insecticides: four tablespoons 25 per cent Wettable Powder Malathion per gallon of water; or two teaspoons of 97 per cent liquid Malathion.

PEUGEOT 404 SEDAN

It's called Peugeot. The most durable car you ever met. But don't take our word for it. American Rodding, the performance car magazine, recently acclaimed Peugeot "The Toughest Car in the World".

Toughness is part of the story. The rest includes solid steel sliding sunroof, safety-proved Michelin X tires, reclining seats that convert to beds, rack-and-pinion steering, 4-speed synchromesh transmission, power brakes, stainless steel bumpers and trim and door-to-door carpeting. Best of all, every one of these "extras" is included in the basic price. The only option you can buy is the new 3-speed torque converter automatic transmission, available on 1967 models.

There are other changes on the 1967 models, too. Bigger trunk. New "breathable" leatherette upholstery. More horsepower. Improved suspension. And many more. See us today and drive a tough bargain. It's called Peugeot. (AVAILABLE IN THE 404 SEDAN AND 404 STATION WAGONS).

First Research also said the highway planned south along the seaboard "will tend to divert large numbers of travelers from inland routes to this future coastal route," through greater Virginia Beach.

Material for the inlet jetties here is coming from Superior Stone quarries in North Carolina. Footing stones weigh 10 to 70 pounds, and larger stones (500 to 2,000 pounds) will hold them in place.

While McLean and Magann have the contract for jetty construction, the Virginia Beach Erosion Commission will dredge the channel.

The commission, headed by E. H. Church, later will pump sand from the sand trap, south of the inlet, north to the beach in front of the boardwalk. Under-channel pipes will be installed at the inlet.

Pickett Wins Demo. Post

The Democratic Executive Committee of Virginia Beach has elected four young men--two from off the committee--to four top offices.

New chairman of the committee, which reorganized last week after a hot July 11 Democratic primary, is Owen Pickett of Lynnhaven Borough.

Pickett was chosen from off the committee with solid Administration Team backing in a showdown with Roger Malbon, nominated by the United Candidates faction.

Pickett had lost to Andre Evans in a primary fight for the commonwealth's attorney nomination.

The committee, with 42 of 46 Administration members present, and 28 of 30 United members on hand, also elected Richard D. Guy, young lawyer in Lynnhaven Borough, as secretary. He is not a committeeman, and the secretary does not have a vote.

The committee elected F. Donald Reid of Bayside Borough, a committeeman, as treasurer; approved a Declaration and By-Laws and voted unanimously to let the Democratic nominees serve as the steering committee for the coming November election against some Republican opposition.

Pickett expressed thanks to Court Clerk John V. Fentress for his years of service as local party chairman and said, "I am not committed to anyone faction. I am not committed to any one person."

After Guy was elected, he expressed thanks to losing candidates in the primary for "giving Democrats a choice."

The Policeman's Lot and Pay

Navy enlisted men are known for their moonlighting to try and make ends meet in this day of rising living costs.

But little public attention has been focused on the moonlighting which some of our city policemen must do to maintain a respectable home for their families.

Police Chief James E. Moore told the SUN recently that Virginia Beach is getting a relatively high quality of man to wear the Police Division's uniform. This is in relation to some of our neighboring cities. He is concerned, however, about the starting patrolman's salary of $408 a month--roughly $100 a week.

Our city has stringent requirements a man must pass to make the force, possibly the most stringent in this metropolitan area.

It would be in order for City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and City Council to take a close look at the police pay situation, as the chief seeks to fill a dozen or so vacancies on the personnel roster of 167, including "summer men."

Salaries, as any thinking man knows, are only a part of the picture in police recruitment, however.

And in other parts of the picture, Virginia Beach has plenty of offer someone seriously interested in law enforcement, and not just a job.

The Police Division is growing with the city, and this means there is room for advancement.

Recent promotions, partly tied to the opening of the Bay-side police precinct, elevated such qualified men as William W. Davis, 42, George K. Bryan, 38, and Walter J. Moore Jr., 34, to captain.

Others who have shown merit and were raised in rank behind those men include some officers and detectives who came to Virginia Beach from Norfolk several years back. The promotion list also reflects a variety of ethnic backgrounds, which is a must in police work today.

Besides the room for advancement in our city, when an officer chooses to do moonlighting for the benefit of himself or his family, there are a growing number of possibilities, such as bank guard or investigator.

There is more to the picture of a future in law enforcement here. But when it comes to pay, the police officer deserves as much attention as the school teacher; now in a pretty respectable pay position locally.

The Year of Pembroke and Today

A new report from Virginia's Division of Planning should stir a lot of happiness in the hearts of local businessmen who count on the multitudes to keep business moving.

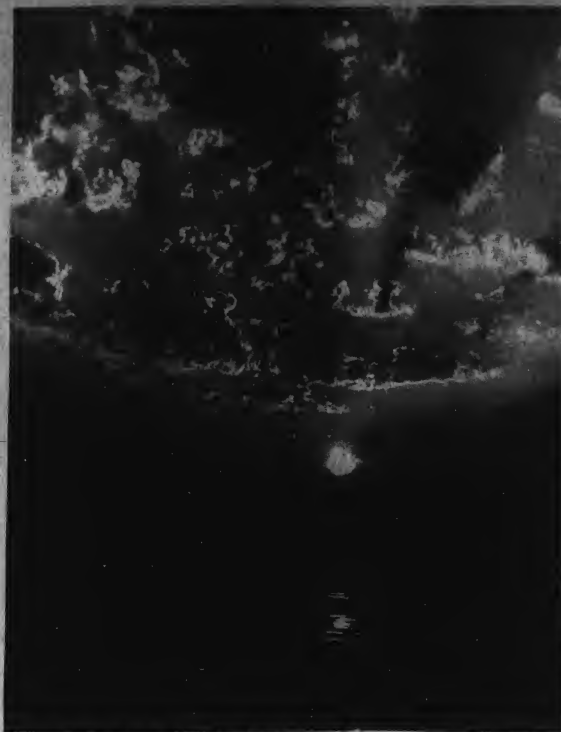

As noted in a story on page one, state officials see our city's populace continuing on the rise and leading in growth south of Hampton Roads.

But there are some sour pickles with the sweet in the report. And they should be straightened out by the city, state or federal government.

HUD and Vietnam

The finally-organized (we hope) U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, better known as HUD, has gotten plenty of mileage out of the abbreviation. But HUD to many is the name of a farm-type feller who looks like a pool player named Paul Newman.

Maybe the pool playing fits, but the farm image doesn't. Perhaps they should call the Department of Housing and Urban Development DHU for short. Seems kind of Vietnamese. And both are changing a lot of lives.

Dear Editor:

It calls me to no end to see the newspapers in Norfolk always picking on Virginia Beach for some reason, and not long ago there was another example of this, and it was obvious.

The Ledger-Star on Saturday, Aug. 5, only this weekend, had a headline that said "October Grand Jury Action Slated for Three Beach Men." I thought it was a local story, but the story listed only one Virginia Beach person and TWO WITH NORFOLK ADDRESSES.

I know we have some people in Virginia Beach that get into trouble, but misleading headlines are not the appropriate way to keep people informed on the news.

A headline much like the last one made me wonder, too, why the daily papers in Norfolk only put in the bad about Virginia Beach, and like in this headline, make it look bigger than it is.

Can't you or someone do something about this?

Michigan Paper on Byrd

The Pontiac (Mich.) Daily Press, editorializing on Virginia's senior U.S. senator, Harry Flood Byrd Jr., following in his father's footsteps: "Senator Harry F. And his voice was heard."

Computer to Aid Teaching

Dr. William J. Hargis, director of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, commenting on a new IBM 1978 Remote Unit installed at the Institute with a direct-line connection to the College of William and Mary's sophisticated computer units: "This new computer system will be an excellent teaching aid, and the young oceanographers trained here will learn modern data handling techniques that will prove useful in their careers in marine research."

Rep. Tuck Protests

Fifth District U.S. Rep. William M. Tuck, of Virginia after discarding a speech written for release to daily newspapers for his banquet appearance before Virginia's commonwealth's attorneys: "The anti-poverty program is a stretch in the nostrils, in my judgment of every right thinking person in America."

Improvement in Education

S.P. Johnson, Jr., elementary and special education of the Virginia Association for Retarded Children: "The number of people who are accepting the idea that no school system is complete until it has an instructional program designed to meet the needs of its handicapped children is rapidly increasing...The result is a vastly improved opportunity for growth for Special Education."

Anchors Differ

Jim Kerrick, safety officer with the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries: "If all anchors 'look alike' to you, it's time for you to consult a qualified marine dealer. Like most other equipment, anchors come in all shapes and sizes and when buying, be sure the type and size fit the design and weight of your boat, as well as the waters she will be used in."

Rep. Downing on Crime Bill

U.S. Rep. Thomas N. Downing, whose First District includes Virginia Beach, speaking of the anti-crime bill in the House of Representatives: "This is a generally acceptable bill... this will be an extremely helpful bill to Virginia, although crime is not a big problem."

Harrison Looks Back

A former Virginia governor, Albertus S. Harrison, recalling the reorganization of the Virginia Department of Industrial Development during his term, which ended in early 1966: "The economic base and taxable sources had to be increased if... services were to be provided without exorbitant increases in real estate, income and other taxes. We couldn't have an adequate system of higher education without more taxes, or move forward in public education, mental and public health." (In an interview by Ken Byerly Sr.)

Science for Non-Scientists

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, urging undergraduate institutions to offer science courses suitable for non-scientists: "It is one of the anomalies of our scientific age that as the grows more complex and as knowledge proliferates to form a myriad of specialized subjects, the demand for people with broad perspective and general understanding is greater than ever before."

Sun Report

Jury Powers, Bureau Key Crime Questions

Should the State of Virginia do away with capital punishment for major crimes?

Is a state bureau of investigation needed in Virginia?

Should juries in the state courts (Circuit, Hustings and Corporation) continue having the right to fix punishment for felonies and misdemeanors, or should the judges determine the punishment?

These three questions appear to be of much concern today among Virginia's commonwealth's attorneys, counterparts to district attorneys and others who legally prosecute alleged criminals in America.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN interviewed several leaders of the Association of Virginia Commonwealth's Attorneys, after they discussed common problems and heard a talk by Del. Stanley Walker, chairman of the State Crime Commission, at The Cavalier Hotel in greater Virginia Beach last Saturday, Aug. 5.

As Some View It

Here is the gist of their answers to the three questions, on which the state group studying crime may, or may not make recommendations in the fall:

*The 1968 General Assembly, to which the commission will make a report, probably will not eliminate capital punishment because many consider the "fear of death" element a strong deterrent to crime.

*Whether the General Assembly seriously gets into the question of shifting punishment responsibility from the jury to the judges hinges on what Walker's commission recommends and the position Gov. Mills Godwin will take. (Campaigning in the November general election, with Republicans bidding for more legislative seats in some Virginia areas, also could affect the situation.

*Barring a change in thinking among sheriffs, city sergeants and other law enforcement officers, the General Assembly probably will not establish a state bureau of investigation. (Neighboring North Carolina has had one for years and there are mixed feelings about it. But there could be action to create a state scientific laboratory to help local police the same way the over-loaded FBI laboratory in the nation's capital aids police on scientific approaches to evidence and crime detection.

To get an indication of problems confronting the state's prosecutors, the SUN asked the outgoing and incoming presidents and secretary-treasurer of the state association this question:

What is the number one problem for Commonwealth's attorneys in Virginia today?

'Lawlessness' and 'Technicalities'

J.R. Snoddy of Buckingham County, secretary-treasurer answered, "The lawlessness that has been bred by the fact that people have gotten the idea they have to obey only the laws they want to."

Peter M. Axon Jr. of Chesapeake, new president, answered this way: "My biggest problem is the unrealistic super technical rules that have been developed in the last few years for the alleged purpose of defending individuals' new-found freedom from punishment."

William R. Blandford of Powhatan County, outgoing president, answered this way: "Frankly, I believe it's the spathy of the public in law and order, and without the proper respect for law and order."

Axon and Snoddy both said lawyers defending criminals often are "on the spot" with the technical requirements growing out of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions, because the lawyers face a challenge from their clients if they do not argue every technicality to try and win a verdict for their clients.

Before the commonwealth's attorneys concluded their business session Saturday, they approved resolutions including the following one:

"Whereas, many persons in the government are rationalizing unlawful actions of the mob by replacing government by law with government by man and,

"Whereas, basic institutions of the nation are being replaced by experiments which are detrimental to the interest of all Americans and,

"Whereas, the search for truth is no longer the cornerstone of justice in our system.

'Respect for Law' Needed

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the members of this organization, jointly and individually, being the true guardian of public interest, dedicate our energies, influence and lives to the preservation of law and order in the nation; to that sacred and revered institution that our government is one of law and not man; that truth and not error is the foundation of all justice; that it is the duty of all Americans to obey the law of the land, and we ask that all loyal Americans join us in our endeavor to maintain domestic peace, for we fully believe that the greatest enemy of liberty is lawlessness and the greatest assurance of freedom is respect for the law.

"And resolved further that we express our concern and disapproval at the failure of the Attorney General of the United States to recognize and attack the lawlessness in the Nation:

"And resolved further that government on all levels recognize that its most basic function is to protect its people in their person and property, and that the law abiding, long-suffering, tax-paying public has rights too, that wrong doing be punished and good rewarded."

Happenings

A full-blown beauty pageant, one complete with all the good things (and a few of the not-so-good): the tears, the smiles, the music, the professional emcee.

To further glamorize the stage full of youthful beauties was the national top beauty: Jane Anne Jayroe, Miss America.

She gave freely of herself... walking, talking and performing as a good queen should, joining emcee Paul Hennings at the microphone to help fill the inevitable time gaps.

Five out of fifteen rose to finalist status: Claudia Jane Chase, Linda C. Satterfield, Catherine D. Meredith (second runner-up), Mary Lucille Parsons (first runner-up), and, of course, the queen.

The contestants themselves liked the all-around personality of Audrey Faye Stocks, choosing her as Miss Congeniality, 1967. So, 18-year old songstress Barbara A. Chulili now has a new hat... and on her it looks real good.

A Woman's Story is the story of Mary Sigillo's life in Europe during World War II.

An American by birth, Mary, as a child, was taken back to her mother's native Belgium. As a teen-ager, she joined the underground Resistance movement, became engaged to another underground worker, Arthur Libre, and was subsequently arrested, along with Libre, for her activities.

Now a Virginia Beach resident (Sigillo was her maiden name), she tells her story, in her own words, for the first time. Following is the fifth installment.

For a short time following their arrest, Libre and Mary were in the same prison; they are now in separate prisons. Though she did not know it at the time, she has seen her fiancé for the last time.

In Song Are Words Exchanged

One thing that I want to tell you is that you might think that you hate when you are being beaten but you don't hate because you know that when you went into the underground, you went in with the idea that you are going to help others.

You don't have any intention of killing or of sabotage or anything like that.

You go in because the flyers are shot down; they need your help. There are women whose husbands have been executed; they need your help. There are children that need homes; they need your help. You don't think of yourself nearly as much. You think of others.

We knew that we couldn't fight the German army. No one could fight the German army. I'm referring to the underground. But the information we gathered and passed on helped others.

The next morning, around 7, by listening through the pipe, I heard Father saying Mass.

Soon I was taken into interrogation, and as soon as I walked in I knew they had found the note I had written. What ever happened to the girl I never found out, but I did find out that she had more than just my note on her.

On my way I came face to face with an uncle of mine. As he passed me he said, "Courage. Keep your faith. This uncle had been hit. His face was all swelled and puffed.

My interrogation was mostly on the work that Arthur had been doing. Did I know this one. Did I know that one. Well, I had found out that if you don't say anything they can't get it out of you, that if you say just one word about the underground, you're licked because they'll beat you until you reveal everything. I stuck to my underground orders: don't say anything.

When I came out of my questioning I went to my cell, but shortly afterwards I was taken from my cell downstairs. There were many, many doors there. I knew they were going to put me behind one of those doors and I screamed. I screamed very, very loud, and I fell to the ground. I asked them to leave me alone. Then I was put into a steam chamber.

How long I was in there I have no idea but when they came to get me and take me out, I fell flat on my face. I was drenched.

They took me back to my cell, but I didn't have any change of clothing, so I had to wash my wool skirt and blouse and everything out in this little pan.

That night I heard this voice and it said, "Marichia! There are only two people who call me that: my mother and my brother. I pushed my tablet towards the window and I cried, "Freddy? It was my brother!

He said, I heard you scream this morning. What did they do to you? I said I had been interrogated, but what they are doing to me is of no interest. Who is here? He said, Uncle is here; Ma was here but they let her go. I don't know how long I'll be here.

I asked, Were you arrested for me?

He said, Yes. They said they would keep us as long as they didn't get you.

I said, Freddy, let's make arrangements that I will sing and you will answer me. I'll sing the 'Star Spangled Banner' and you answer me by whistling so we'll know that we're both still here. We'll talk at night so that nobody will hear us.

We prayed right there at that window in our own way.

Miss Alice Rosemary Rudy, a Bayside High School teacher during this past school year, was married Saturday, Aug. 5, in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Petersburg. She is the bride of Ena, Carl Dawson Kilhoffer, USN.

Miss Rudy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Weeks Rudy of Petersburg.

Mr. Kilhoffer's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Carl George Kilhoffer of Hughesville, Md.

The Rev. W. Rosser Muir officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a full length gown of silk organza over taffeta, with a sabrina neckline and a fitted bodice. Chantilly lace, re-embroidered with pearls, was applied on the bodice, sleeves and shaped skirt. Her bridal veil of tiered silk illusion fell from a demi-cap of matching chantilly lace. She carried her great-grandmother's Bible.

Let's Pack a Peck of Pickles

The abundance of local crops now reaching roadside stands and area markets points up the necessity of scrounging around for new ways of preparing the summertime favorites. Squash, for instance, cucumbers, tomatoes and green beans, are in such excellent supply right now but a family soon tires of the same old dishes fixed in the same old way....to say nothing of the weary cook.

Betty Jo Curran, Vepco home economist, relinquished a few of her favorite recipes: recipes she has tried and recommends.

From time to time, as space permits, we'll publish them, as well as any others we may acquire. All are geared to the present availability of the crops.

Following are two pickle recipes from Mrs. Curran's file. The first is a bread and butter pickle, the other is for sweet pickles.

Bread and Butter Pickles

6 qts. medium cucumbers, sliced
6 medium onions, sliced
1 cup salt
Water to cover

Combine above ingredients and let stand 3 hours; drain.

1/2 cup mustard seed
1 T. celery seed

1 1/2 qts. vinegar
6 cups sugar

Combine above ingredients, then add cucumbers and onions. Heat to simmering. DO NOT BOIL. Pack into hot, sterilized jars and seal.

Sweet Cucumber Pickles

7 lbs. cucumbers, sliced 1/8 inch thick
2 gal. lime water (dehydrated lime)
6 lb. sugar
5 pt. white vinegar (regular may be used)
1 tsp. mace
1 tsp. cloves
1 tsp. allspice
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. celery seed
1 tsp. cinnamon

Soak sliced cucumbers in lime water overnight (3 cups lime to 1 gallon of water). Drain and soak for 4 hours in plain water, changing the water every hour; Drain well.

Make a syrup of sugar, vinegar and spices, bringing to a boil. Pour over cucumbers and let stand overnight.

Next morning, boil all together for 1 hour, stirring often. Put in small jars and seal.

A car trunk is as good a place as any for displaying (and selling) the season's crops.

Brother, Sister Meet in Prison

Copyright 1967 Jeanne Magee Tucker

The following morning, when it was quite early, the Gestapo banged my door open and asked me who had I talked with the night before. I said no one. I said, I'm here between four walls, a wooden bed, a wooden chair, a dripping faucet and a window I can't reach. Whom can I talk to but God?

They asked again. Tell us who you were talking to last night, and exactly what you said.

I said, I didn't say anything. I think maybe I was talking to myself. I said no more.

This was Aug. 15th. They went upstairs and the next thing I knew I could hear them beating my brother. They left my door open but there were two Gestapo standing right there.

When they came down they had this leather belt in their hands. My brother screamed. Hit me, but leave my sister alone.

I screamed. Leave him alone. He's a child. If you want to do anything, do it to me. He doesn't deserve it. I do.

They swung the leather belt over their heads. I was on the floor.

They said, Tell us what you said. I looked up at the German and asked, How would you feel if you killed somebody because they prayed? They left me alone.

They left and as the door closed behind them, something came over me and I got the shakes. I realize now that at that time I was very close to a breakdown. It was a terrible experience.

I knew that I had to be careful.

What had happened was that a Belgian deserter was in the cell right next to my brother.

You know, the German people are honest people. They had no respect for deserters or traitors, believe me. So when they had this traitor he might have thought that if he talked his punishment would be diminished. But the Germans didn't work that way, so it ended there.

That afternoon I sang and I heard Arthur singing back. That night my brother whistled the "Star Spangled Banner." They had transferred him to the other side of the concentration camp but we could still whistle and sing.

Aug. 15 is a day quite celebrated in Europe: it is the feast of the Immaculate Conception. That day I was given a plum and a small piece of a turnover. Supper was a treat. Not only the plum and turnover, but we got a small piece of cabbage, potato and a small piece of fish. It was very small and it smelled terrible, but it was food.

About an hour later I was again taken to interrogation. When I got to the office there was a German soldier sitting behind the desk. He looked at me and said, Why will you please tell me why a girl of your calibre, with your background of music and everything you have to live for, why did you get into the underground service?

I said, I am not in the underground service but I do believe in freedom. I said, If it was reversed, wouldn't you fight for what you believe?

I believe that if we don't help others we cannot expect to be helped. We do not have a Red Cross now so it falls to us to help people.

Then he said he would like to hear me sing... an aria of an opera. I told him that I would be glad to. What would he like to hear?

He replied an aria from Madame Butterfly.

So I was taken to my cell and around 7 that night I gave my voice full force, despite all that I had gone through that morning. Full force I sang and I sang.

As you read Arthur's book (a diary Arthur wrote for Mary) you will see what he says hearing those three numbers did to him. They really elevated his morale tremendously. He could hear me, clearly.

Another trip to interrogation, some days later, and as I went into the interrogation room, out of the room came this man who was covered with blood. I looked and said, Mon Dieu, My God. What have they done to you? He looked at me and said, Pray for me. He had a good look at me, but him I could never recognize for his condition. He was really beyond recognition.

Later I was to find out that this was the Priest who said Mass every day.

In this prison, when we were taken out for a walk, your cell door is opened and you walk with your hands on your head. Nobody in front of you, nobody in back of you because you are in solitary... day and night.

You are taken downstairs and led through a small door. Going through this door I'm reminded of a pie that has been cut into all these sections because the walk itself is circular, a cobblestone walkway about two feet wide. In other words you just walk round and round. In the center of the circle, opposite the door you have just come from, walks a German guard. All he has to do is turn one way or the other and he sees what is going on in all of these walks.

When you are being interrogated, while you don't say anything, the Gestapo often says things. I was sure from their way they said that Arthur's leader was the traitor who had squealed on us. His underground name was Felix.

I started writing with a hairpin on the wall... just a little at a time... writing, I chat (the cat), Felix, the cat. I felt that if the Germans had questioned me I could have gotten away with it somehow.

And I felt that Arthur would be able to figure it out.

When I finally got it on the wall, and when Arthur was out walking, he whistled our song, First Date, and I whistled back through the window. I also sang through the window, Ecce Homo... which means, write me... On the Wall of Your Garden.

So with this, Arthur noticed the writing on the wall. His book will verify that... and he got the word that Felix was the cat.

One day, as I was being taken out for my walk, I came down the stairs and there was Arthur. They were washing out his cell and he was standing with his face against the wall, but as I came down the stairs I coughed and, of course, he turned and saw me. That is the last time I saw him. We couldn't say a word. All of this is in his book, which, after you read it, will make more sense.

Soon I was transferred again.

One night, just before dinner time, I had washed my hair in my little basin of water and while it was still soaking wet, my door opened and I was taken from my cell to one downstairs. This was a cell usually occupied by prisoners who were to die. They spent their last night there. The window was barricaded and there was no bed and no chair. There was only a small stool. I didn't know what to expect. I thought, Am I going to be put to death? I spent the night there, but around 3 the next afternoon, I was told that I was going to another prison.

NEXT WEEK: Mary, transferred to another prison, is befriended by a Catholic Nun.

HOW MUCH IS TOO MUCH to pay for health? Perhaps you believe that today's medicines are too high in price. Some capsules your doctor prescribes may cost 50 cents each... a dollar each... or even more. This sounds expensive.

But is it?

Divide the price of the medicine into four parts, so that you can see what you are getting for your money:

1. A smaller hospital bill because an effective medication put an end to the ailment in a few days or a few hours.
2. Fewer visits from your doctor because new discovery stopped an infection quickly.
3. Wages earned because a complete recovery was possible sooner than would have been the case a few years ago.
4. A life because "expensive" drugs helped resist possible serious after-effects (a danger of prolonged illness).

We believe you will agree that today's medicines aren't so expensive after all, because they bring you real value for your money. They represent one of your best investments.

VBLT The Season Cometh

The Virginia Beach Little Theater is well on the way with plans for the upcoming season at the Courtyard Playhouse.

At a recent meeting of the ticket sales committee, Larry Williams, theater treasurer, named a committee of three to replace the committee of one who has held that post for the past four years. Mrs. Jesse Drew is outgoing ticket chairman. Williams announced that he as chairman will be assisted by Shirley Fentress and Gwen Kiser.

Deadline for the listing of patrons names carried in the program is Aug. 31.

Application blanks for theater season tickets are available at Hofheimer's, Alexander-Beagle, The Book Nook, Capt. Jim's Imports and Liz's Serendipity, by writing to the Virginia Beach Little Theater, Box 1053, Virginia Beach.

Students In the News

An area girl was among 57 newly-admitted freshmen at American University who have been awarded scholarships for the coming year.

She is Marcia Frances Bartusik, of Indian Hill Road, a recent graduate of Frank W. Cox High School.

Barbara K. Emerson, of Horseshoe Bend Road, a rising senior at Dickinson College, has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester.

Three area students were recently named to the dean's list in the University of Virginia's School of Engineering and Applied Science.

They are: Edwin Leidholdt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Leidholdt of Reynolds Drive, William Sherman III, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sherman Jr., of Battery Road and High Wood.

Two local students at the University of Ohio have been named to that college's spring honor roll.

They are Dean Edwin Booher and Edwin Svejson Brock Jr.

Miss Allison E. Forbes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Keith Forbes of Goodspeed Road has been named to the dean's list at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa. Miss Forbes received a bachelor of arts degree in June.

Kenneth A. Black, a pre-law student at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, recently attended an orientation program for entering freshmen.

Jo Ann Sahaj is enrolled for the summer session at the University of Pennsylvania, University Park.

Larry W. Chase of North Birdneck Road has been accepted at Lincoln University in Pennsylvania for the fall semester. Chase will enter as a freshman.

Ruth Ann Oliver was among a total of 28 students in the Virginia Tech College of Home Economics who earned top honors during the spring quarter and were named to the dean's list. The students scored a 3.4 or better average on a 4.0 grading system.

Virginia Colleges Speak on 'Greeks'

Are fraternities and sororities on the increase or decrease in colleges and universities?

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN recently took a survey of four Virginia colleges and universities to get some indication of the answer.

The four were the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Washington and Lee University in Lexington and Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg.

Officials at all schools were asked the same questions: generally, are fraternities and sororities increasing or decreasing, how does the particular college feel about such social groups, how many fraternities and sororities are there on the campus, and approximately how many members do they have.

Here are their answers:

"In the last 10 years," according to Edward C. Atwood Jr., Dean of Students at Washington and Lee University, "the number (of fraternities) has remained at 18 and the membership at approximately 80 per cent of the student body." Membership is 838 at the institution, which has only male students.

At Virginia, "The number of fraternities at the University is rising," said C. Lee Hilbert, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

"There was, however, a decrease in membership in the last three years to 37 per cent of the student body," Hilbert added. He feels that the figure may rise or level off within the next school year and said the general thought is the decrease was due to the increase in enrollment without a proportionate increase in fraternity membership.

William C. Burleson Jr., director of the news bureau at VPI, wrote that "currently there are no fraternities or sororities being recognized by the University. There is a committee of the University Council looking into the matter of social fraternities and sororities, however."

Both fraternity and sorority membership have dropped at the College of William and Mary, according to Ross Weeks Jr., director of public information. "In 1957, 38 per cent of the male student body was involved in fraternal activities; currently there are 23 per cent. In the same year, 49 per cent of the female student body were members of sororities; now it is 47 per cent."

How the university or college administrations view fraternity life apparently depends on the particular institution. "On the W & L campus," there is evidence of some dissatisfaction with the fraternity stress on social life and the lack of academic orientation," wrote Dean Atwood.

Hilbert at Virginia wrote, "The present administration views fraternities favorably, as the fraternities and their governing body, the Inter-Fraternity Council have exhibited their ability to regulate themselves effectively and to maintain and expand their position of high standing in academics, athletics, student leadership and general service to the University and the community."

According to Dean J. W. Lambert, of W & M, "the College has a policy of assisting fraternities and sororities to develop to their fullest potential as organizations which can assist greatly in the whole education of young men and women."

The University of Virginia has the largest number of fraternities—31, with one "colony"

(a fledgling fraternity working towards national recognition), one group working toward colonization and two other groups who have expressed interest in trying to colonize. Their combined membership is approximately 1,700.

There are 449 "brothers" from 11 nationally affiliated fraternities and 659 "sisters" from nine sororities on the William and Mary Campus.

Are fraternities and sororities on the increase or decrease in colleges and universities? The answer in Virginia apparently depends entirely on the institution.

Sewers Due in '68 For Diamond Springs

The installation of sewer mains planned in the Diamond Springs area of greater Virginia Beach will be completed by early in 1968, according to present city plans.

Worth Petty, acting city public utilities director, estimated six months is needed to finish the project, for which competitive construction bids were opened last week.

The lines are planned on both sides of Northampton Boulevard, between Norfolk Avenue and Diamond Springs Road, and on both sides of the latter, north to an existing Hampton Roads Sanitation District (HRSD) interceptor on Shore Drive.

The interceptor ties into a sewage treatment plant being built at the Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, in northwest Virginia Beach.

Vico Construction Corp. was low bidder on the lines, with a $121,275 offer. Hunt Contracting Co. submitted the lowest bid for a related pumping station, planned at Northampton and Diamond Springs intersection. The bid was $36,576.

Petty said all bids received have been sent to City Manager W. Russell Hatchett for presentation to City Council which will meet Aug. 14.

HRSD recently awarded a contract for sewer interceptor lines for part of its system being developed in Virginia Beach's suburbs. E.C. Womack Co. received a $368,727 contract for a trunk line along Independence Boulevard, north from Wishart Road to Shore Drive.

The sewer lines are being installed in advance of a planned construction start on the north half of Independence, being developed as a four-lane, divided highway to Vir-

Brazil Has No Report Cards For Students, Traveler Says

(Editor's Note: While the Brazilian destroyer C.T. PAIUI (D-31), former USS Lewis Hancock, is visiting ports on the Atlantic seaboard, Lawrence E. (Lem) Marshall II of Ewell Road is in Brazil as an exchange student. The rising senior at Virginia Beach's Princess Anne High wrote the following personal observations from Rio de Janeiro, seaport on Guanabara Bay on Brazil's Atlantic coastline.)

By Lem Marshall
The Brazilian "colegio," the equivalent of the American high school, is quite different from American high schools. Brazilian high schools are generally operated by the Catholic church, or are otherwise privately-operated. Very few are government supported. (All universities are government operated.)

Although co-educational schools are now becoming more common, the large majority of high schools are sexually segregated. Classes begin around 7 a.m. and conclude about 11:30 a.m. with a 20-minute recess.

The students do not change classes after each period. The teachers come to the students, as the same group of students stay together the whole class day.

Students are given very little choice as to subjects, being able to choose only between an engineering schedule, which includes several math courses, chemistry, physics, biology and the required subjects of Portuguese, English and religion; and a more liberal schedule, including government, history, economics, geography, a few number of math and science courses and the required courses.

Lem Marshall

Chemistry, physics and biology generally are taught without the aid of laboratories. Few Brazilian schools have laboratories, and the student receives an occasional demonstration by the teacher.

There is a lack of school spirit and personal association which make the years spent in an American high school so much more meaningful to most students.

It cannot be denied, however, that the Brazilian student receives an excellent, comprehensive education. Courses are difficult, teachers demanding, and, for the conscientious student, the hours spent in study are many. Little emphasis, however, is placed upon grades, since acceptance by a university is dependent entirely upon entrance examinations given by that school.

Will Beach Support Local Pony Races?

Pony harness races planned this weekend at Ivor, Va., 18 miles west of Suffolk, could determine whether the growing spectator sport comes to greater Virginia Beach in the near future.

The Virginia Beach Sertoma Club is sponsoring the annual "family-style" racing event at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 13, at Clark's Pony Farm on Va. Highway 460. One purpose is to learn how much interest there is in the Virginia Beach area in such racing.

Allen C. Watson, chairman of the club's board of directors, said the races at Ivor are sanctioned by the National Trotting Pony Association, headquartered in Hanover, Pa. Shetland ponies are used, and there will be entries from at least nine states along the Atlantic seaboard.

Children ages 12 through 15 will be driving sulkies in three of seven races. Four races will have $150 purses, and three will have $100 purses. There will be two heats for each race on the quarter-mile track. Each heat will be a half mile.

The Sertoma Club will use proceeds from the event for its various charitable health projects.

Seaside Park Adds Dances

The management of Seaside Park recently announced that the "Frolics" dance pavilion at the park will be open Monday through Friday nights to all teenagers instead of two nights a week.

At this time, only soft drinks will be sold. The "Frolics", which features the Upshakers as the house band, is open from 8 p.m. to midnight and admission is 50 cents per person.

40 Reasons Why Norfolk Wants Va. Beach

A Millers Family Department Store Had its Formal Opening Here on Monday, Aug. 14, and Found Plenty of Shoppers Willing to Buy. The New Store Is on Military Highway and Near Indian River Road in the West Part of Kempsville Borough. This is the second Millers Store in Virginia Beach. (Sun Photo)

As people in metropolitan areas move to the suburbs by the thousands, the merchants, distributors, service firms and industries eventually move with them.

It has been happening for several years in greater Virginia Beach, and a number of old Norfolk firms have quietly moved across the line, or established branches here.

Hardest hit has been the downtown Norfolk area. The 21st Street area of Norfolk is declining as businessmen look to the future here, particularly in the populous Lynnhaven, Bayside and Kempsville boroughs.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN last week gave population growth as an indication of why Norfolk would like to merge with Virginia Beach.

The shift of business firms from the central city to this suburban-resort-agricultural city is more tangible evidence, and the SUN can also document it.

Some of the old established firms and corporations which have crossed the city line out of Norfolk the last few years:

Old Dominion Tobacco Company, United Mortgage Servicing Corp., E.V. Williams Co., Davis & Lee Inc., U.S. Flag & Signal Co., Bailey Welding Co., Gary Steel Products Corporation, Prudential Storage & Van Co., Krispy Kreme Doughnut Co., Charles Campbell Plano Co., Four City Distributing Corp., Clayton's and Lindy's Delicatessen.

Other businessmen, many who live in Virginia Beach, have located stores or offices here.

They include Rices, Hoffmeier, C.A. Nash & Son, Louis Legum Furniture Company, Sullivan's Men's Wear, The Hub, Mr. John Hairstyling, Abel Frame & Art Supply, Master Auto, McIntosh Studio of Photography, Sportman's Shop, Temple of Music, Dara's Jr. Size Fashions, and Mary Carter Paint Stores among others.

Most of the commercial growth has been in Lynnhaven and Bayside Boroughs, with some now going to Kempsville Borough, where a new Millers Family Department Store has opened on Military Highway. (Wards TV-Appliance of Norfolk is doing business) at the Millers store, the second one in Virginia Beach.)

Financial institutions, such as Norfolk Federal Savings & Loan Association, First National Bank of Norfolk, Seaboard Citizens National Bank and Southern Bank of Norfolk, began branch operations in Virginia Beach the last few years.

First & Merchants National Bank and Virginia National Bank have the largest operations here. Virginia Commonwealth Bankshares plans a First Colonial Bank in the city.

First & Merchants arrived through a merger with the old Bank of Virginia Beach, after that bank and the Bank of Princess Anne County merged earlier.

Plans by Thalheimer's of Richmond to build at Pembroke East on Constitution Avenue, in the next two years has added new impetus to commercial growth on the Virginia Beach side of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk line.

Other Richmond-based firms came here earlier, such as Anderson and Strudwick and Miller & Rhoads. And such businesses as Sears, Roebuck and Co., Parkline Jewelry Company of San Antonio and Topy's International of Kansas City are betting on Virginia Beach's future.

When the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway opens late this year, it is expected to spur further development along the corridor between western city limit at Davis Corner and Virginia Beach's oceanfront.

Security Storage & Van Co., already is starting to build, where the Expressway will have an interchange with Independence Boulevard. Hoffman Beverage Co., long located in Norfolk, has a new plant under construction near the Greenwich area in Kempsville Borough.

While many old Norfolk firms have moved to Virginia Beach or established branches here in recent years, others have moved within Norfolk as far east as they could without crossing the line.

Sales Up At Beach Liquor Stores

The sale of whisky and other spirits by State ABC Stores in greater Virginia Beach soared during the last fiscal year, when a fourth store—at Pembroke Mall—was opened.

Records of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in Richmond show total receipts of $2.85 million for the year ending June 30, 1967, compared with $2.34 million in the previous year.

In June of this year alone, sales in the Virginia Beach stores passed the quarter-million-dollar mark. The three older stores are on Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Avenue in Virginia Beach Borough, and on Indian River Road in Kempsville Borough.

Despite the opening of the store at the Mall, located in Bayside Borough, each of the other three stores held their own in the year ending June 30.

Here is a breakdown on sales for each of the stores, with figures for the past year first, and those for the previous year (1965-66) in parenthesis:

Pembroke, $305,398.37 (not open previous year); Atlantic Avenue, $707,993.17 ($710,413.50); Pacific Avenue, $982,620.15 ($995,021.51); and Indian River, $661,364.90 ($635,894.92).

At the three older stores in June of this year, sales were above those for the same period of 1966.

The figures for the four stores in June of this year: Atlantic Avenue, $73,510.70; Pacific Avenue, $106,640.10; Indian River, $52,239.85; and Pembroke, $34,053.65.

A Passing Thought

"Before a people can be declared unfit to be the custodian of its own conscience, it must be trusted and given the opportunity to learn from its own mistakes." —Sidney Hook

Will England's Princess Anne Meet Beach's Princess Anne?

City Council has taken a step toward inviting Princess Anne of Great Britain here in 1968 to do cornerstone honors for the new Virginia Beach Municipal Center, rising at historic Princess Anne Court House.

The Virginia General Assembly in 1966 helped set the stage for such a move when it approved resolution introduced by State Sen. William P. Kellam, to invite the daughter of Queen Elizabeth II to Virginia.

If the invitation is accepted after long preparation, Princess Anne's visit will focus international attention on this city of seven boroughs and a growing population. The invitation to the 14-year-old princess is for next spring.

City Council on Monday authorized City Manager W. Russell Hatchett to personally make the formal invitation. Several municipal office buildings already are under construction at Princess Anne Court House.

In other action on Monday, council:

Scheduled a public hearing for 10 a.m., Aug. 28, on the proposed extension of Jitney (mini-bus) service from the city's main oceanfront resort area to NAS Oceana and FAAWTC at Dam Neck.

Approved a $640,000 loan from the city's general fund for the purchase of about 543 acres of Green Run Farm in Princess Anne Borough from the City of Norfolk. (A federal grant has Hatchett been applied for, but has not yet been approved, to cover half the cost.)

Decided to seek another location for the proposed Mental Health Clinic building, since a number of persons objected to locating it at Wollans Road and Regency Drive in Lynnhaven Borough.

Rejected a request from the Aragona Pentecostal Holiness Chapel for permission to build a church at the corner of Jack Frost Road and Lake Shores Road in Bayside Borough.

Deferred, until a public hearing in October, an application by K. N. Nichols to construct a 97-unit motel between Third and Fourth streets in Virginia Beach Borough. Nichols said he cannot get a city permit to build there until the zoning law for that area is changed.

Approved the Freeman Motor Company's plans to operate a used car lot at the southwest corner of Bird Neck Road and Virginia Beach Boulevard, in Lynnhaven Borough.

Denied a change of zoning which Donald Wayne Persell requested for land at Maryland and Surfside avenues near Croatan Beach, south of Rudee Inlet.

Deferred, until the first council meeting in September, a request by Joe H. Burt and Dr. Fitzhugh Mayo, for permission to dig a borrow pit on land 1.4 miles north of Shipp's Corner Road and west of London Bridge Road in Lynnhaven Borough.

Approved a use permit for Hassell E. Perrell to operate a car wash on Virginia Beach Boulevard at Rose Marie Avenue in Bayside Borough.

Approved the extension of a use permit for a Marina Motor Apartments to build a 33-unit motel at Pacific Avenue and Seventh Street in Virginia Beach Borough.

When the City School Board on Tuesday, Aug. 15, named Brickell an assistant superintendent, chairman J.W. Bufington said there is no question Brickwell will succeed Supt. Frank W. Cox in the top job early in 1968.

Cox had ended speculation on his future retirement by giving the board a letter Tuesday. The board accepted it "with deep regret," effective March 1, of next year.

Among the questions put to 300 adults, Cox said, was this one: Should we merge with Norfolk?

Asked whether they support the nation's present policy in Vietnam, 52 per cent said they do not, 44 per cent said they do and 4 per cent gave other answers according to Cox.

When asked whether the "local prison and police systems" are strong and efficient, 43 per cent said "no," 30 per cent said "yes," 27 per cent had other answers, according to Cox.

The survey showed a 59 per cent "yes" and a 38 per cent "no" on the question of whether the national minimum voting age should be 18 years.

Cox said the survey questions were based on matters the summer class discussed on local and national affairs.

A random survey of city areas by students in a government class at Princess Anne High indicates Virginia Beach citizens overwhelmingly reject any idea of a merger between Norfolk and Virginia Beach, according to E.E. Cox, social science teacher.

Cox this week released the results of the survey, which he said was made Aug. 4-5 in the Aragona, Pembroke, Princess Anne Plaza, Hilltop, Kempsville, Indian River, Bayside, Oceana, London Bridge, GEX, Robbins Corner, Courthouse and Thalia areas.

Results were split on other questions, including one on the war effort in Vietnam.

New Boat 'Trails' Charted

A new boating chart, 129-SC, covering waters along the Virginia and North Carolina seaboard, as well as Back Bay in greater Virginia Beach, are now available, according to the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

They can be obtained from nautical chart agents, or from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Washington Science Center, Rockville, Md.

Brickell Likes Shakespeare, Wears 'Key'

Edward E. Brickell, 41, is a man who wears a Phi Beta Kappa key, loves Shakespeare and has a way of getting things done as an administrator in Virginia Beach's public schools.

When the City School Board on Tuesday, Aug. 15, named Brickell an assistant superintendent, chairman J.W. Buf-

ington said there is no question Brickwell will succeed Supt. Frank W. Cox in the top job early in 1968.

UCF Launches Drive for $6,150

VIRGINIA BEACH BOROUGH—The United Communities Fund has launched its annual fund drive in the city's resort borough, with A.M. Randolph and Earl V. Slattum heading the campaign for $6,150.

A kick-off breakfast was held Tuesday morning of this week at Neptune's Corner on Atlantic Avenue. Among those present were W. Mackenzie Jenkins, Jr., general unit chairman for the area-wide drive planned later, Paul O. Hirschbuhl, UCF vice president, and Tim Sheets, executive director for the organization.

Slattum and Randolph outlined plans for the drive at the breakfast. The UCF campaign traditionally is held in the Virginia Beach Borough area of greater Virginia Beach while summer restaurants and motels are in full operation.

The overall goal of the UCF for Virginia Beach, Norfolk, and eastern Chesapeake is $2,085,349 for 1967-68. The fund supports or aids 52 health, welfare, rehabilitation and character building agencies.

Traveler Is Now Assistant Principal

PRINCESS ANNE BOROUGH—A South Norfolk-born world traveler has been named assistant principal for instruction at Kellam High School.

GOP Moving, too Pickett Picks Women For Demo. Posts

Five women are among 37 persons named to party positions here by Owen B. Pickett, chairman of the Virginia Beach Democratic Committee elected in the July 11 primary.

Pickett released the names of the appointees, including 10 vice chairmen, when he recently announced plans for a meeting of the 76-member committee this week Wednesday, Aug. 16, at Princess Anne Court House.

Meanwhile, local Republicans, with Martin A. Trengle as their committee chairman, have opened a headquarters near Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center for the November election campaign.

The GOP earlier announced five candidates to oppose five Democrats for state legislative and constitutional posts in greater Virginia Beach.

Women appointed by Pickett to Democratic positions are Imogene Garrett, second vice chairman; Marcia S. Rosenblatt, assistant to Secretary Richard D. Guy; Kathryn E. Robbins, rules committee, and Paula Collins, steering committee.

Pickett named James G. Darden, a former councilman, as first vice chairman, and Rodney Green as third vice chairman of the committee.

He named the following borough vice chairmen:

Revenue Commissioner Ivan D. Mapp, seeking re-election, Bayside; Councilman Earl Tebbutt, Blackwater; Court Clerk John V. Festress, seeking re-election, Kempsville; Kenneth N. Whitehurst Jr., House of Delegates candidate, Lynnhaven; Norris Shirley, Princess Anne; Irving Vaughan, Pungo, and Langley Land, Virginia Beach Borough.

Pickett named the following to standing committees, as provided in a policy declaration and by-laws the city committee adopted at its first meeting after the primary:

Finance—Frank Tarrall, Ira Hancock and C.C. Absalom; Rules, Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell Jr., J. Frank Gallagher and Kathryn E. Robbins; Auditing—David L. Cassida, Roger Sawyer and Tony Thomas; Legislation, R.R. McChesney, Philip J. Terveer and A.L. Bonney Jr., and Steering—Councilman Lawrence E. Marshall, Robert H. Watlington, R.L. Riggs, Dr. John M. Pool, C.P. Land, William H. Lyon Jr., C.R. Sparrow, Lewis Thurston, Councilman George Ferrell and Paula Collins.

Letters Laud Ocean Hiway
Hundreds of letters praising the Ocean Hiway have been received by the Ocean Hiway Association headquarters at Greater Virginia Beach, according to a recent news release from the organization.
Many of the letters specifically mention the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. Following are excerpts from some of these.
From Bethayres, Pa.: "Last November was our first experience over the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, which makes the Ocean Hiway more than ever our favorite route to Florida."
From Bomosun, Va.: "We certainly enjoyed the new Bridge-Tunnel last year. Heading south soon and always travel the Ocean Hiway."
From Wallington, N.J.: "Took the Ocean Hiway to Florida and enjoyed it very much. Had a wonderful experience crossing the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel."
From Storks, Conn.: "About three years ago I drove over the Ocean Hiway and loved it but will enjoy the Bridge-Tunnel even more."
From Guilford, Me.: "The scenery is so lovely every bit of the way. Splendid Hiways."
W & M Revises Registration
The College of William and Mary will postpone for one week the opening of its fall semester, to enable it to take maximum advantage of progress being made on three major construction projects.
Under the revised schedule, orientation for freshmen will begin Sept. 17, freshmen registration will be held Sept. 21, returning students and graduate students will register Sept. 22-23; and classes will begin Sept. 25.

Many trees are lost each year because homeowners fail to stake them properly. If trees aren't staked, they will very often grow crooked.
One method of staking is to use a two-inch by two-inch wood stake or metal pipe. Place the stake in the hole before filling in the earth. It may damage the roots if you place it after you've planted the tree.
Set the stake about two feet deep. Have it high enough to support the tree. If you use only one stake, place it on the side of the prevailing wind. For tying, thread a wire through a piece of garden hose.
Another method is to use guy wire or cables. Slope them from about half way up the trunk at about a 45-degree angle to the ground. Attach the upper ends with lag screws or by threading the guy wire through a piece of garden hose. Anchor the lower ends of the wires to stakes driven deeply into the soil. For a large tree, use three wires.

Visitor Finds Peru 'Politely Swinging'

Kathy Wright feels that Peru is a politely swinging place. Kathy is one of three Princess Anne High School students who are on an exchange program to various South American countries this summer.

The main difference Kathy finds in Peru is the manner in which young people date, she wrote in a letter to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

She compares a North American girl to a Peruvian girl by saying that in the United States, a girl can have many friends that are boys, but in Peru, there is very little fraternizing other than at parties.

Coming in "late" from a Peruvian date is 10 or 10:30 p.m.; but at parties the dating deadline is extended until one, two, three or four o'clock, depending upon how well the parents are acquainted with the host or hostess' parents, Kathy noted.

She writes that the only boy a 17- or 18-year-old Peruvian bride really gets to know is her husband—after they are married. The girls usually marry their third or fourth boy friend.

The dances in South America are "suggestive in a subtle way, while the dances we do are more suggestive in a grotesque manner," Kathy writes. The "huayno" (pronounced wí'no) is a typical sierra dance. "It's very happy, very cute and very easy," added Kathy.

"The most horrible representative of the U. S. is an American tourist," she writes. Kathy added that she does not mean all "tourists," but a minority which gives the majority "the bad name" because they "are dirty and evidently they think all other countries are on this earth to serve them."

Peruvian shopkeepers close up for two and a half hours a day for lunch, which is the largest meal of the day, according to Kathy. "But this is a custom here, and what right Kathy Wright have these brassy tourists to think a whole civilization should change to accommodate them?" "Don't think that now I'd like to be anything but from the U.S. It's the greatest country in the world, and I am proud to be a citizen of it," Kathy writes.

However some of the travelers better take a closer look at how others see their actions. Others, also, think that their country is the best," remarks Kathy.

The Peruvian young folk seem to be very manner conscious. "The first thing a young person does when he comes to the house is greet the parents if they are available," according to Kathy. "On the street, boys always walk on the outside, carry the packages and open doors."

"The best part," Kathy mentioned, "is that it's all natural. The majority of the people have been raised like this, and it's only the way they are."

Dr. Kahn Named ASHA Fellow

The governing council of the American School Health Association has declared Howard D. Kahn of Virginia Beach a Fellow of the association.

Notice of the honor was received by the local optometrist on Aug. 12 in a letter from A.O. DeWeese, M.D., executive secretary.

German Girl Comes Here

Adelheid Charlotte Schwarz described her trip to Virginia Beach from Bremen, Germany, as "wonderful, I loved every minute of it."

Adelheid, 17, arrived Monday in Virginia Beach to spend a year as a foreign exchange student at First Colonial High School. She will live at the home of Dr. and Mrs. O.M. Wakefield on E. Bay Shore Drive in Lynnhaven Borough.

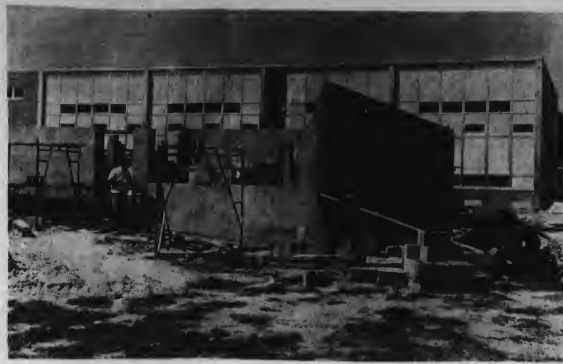

She has studied English for six years and is a sports enthusiast, playing handball, and swimming and skiing.

Adelheid's visit is being sponsored by First Colonial's Interact Club, which held many fund raising events during the 1966-67 school year to pay for her trip here.

Men of Vision, Courage

In just a few short days, death has claimed two of Virginia Beach's most prominent men. We know them as ardent conservationist Benjamin Baker Burroughs, and industrialist John P. Parker.

Not only were they close personal friends, but each as an individual was a man of vision, courage and integrity.

It is ironic that the death of Mr. Burroughs came as the State of Virginia is working on a master plan to better utilize Seashore State Park, which he successfully fought to preserve; among his other accomplishments in his long and fruitful life of 77 years.

Mr. Parker was among the first men to start an industry in what is now Virginia Beach. He and his father, John K. Parker Sr., and brother George J. Parker, started J.K. Parker, Inc., a structural steel firm which in recent years has been building portable metal buildings, including schools.

For a man who lived 52 years, Mr. Parker also fought a lot of battles, including one to build a plant in Greece to manufacture war supplies for the Greek Army in the Albanian campaign of World War II.

To the friends and families of both men, we extend our sympathies and know many in our community take their deaths as a personal loss.

The Boom at the Beach

The old strategy known as "divide and rule" is well known as a management and political technique. It also apparently is used by a political editorial writer in a neighboring city, with the Democratic Party in greater Virginia Beach as the target.

There appeared on the editorial page of The Virginian-Pilot last Saturday, Aug. 12, a headline, "Breach at the Beach."

It caught our eye since we live in the city, although not right "at the Beach." The editorial was a somewhat nasty attack on some local Democrats who already face the job of fighting Republicans in the November election. It indicated the editorial writer does not know what is going on in our city.

The editorial was slyly critical of an "unwritten opinion" by Virginia's attorney general, accused Mr. Owen B. Pickett (new chairman of the local Democratic Executive Committee) of overruling a majority of the 75-member committee by naming a "steering committee," and of giving cheer to the Republicans.

We observed and took notes at a Democratic committee meeting mentioned in the editorial, and here are the facts on the issues it garbled.

The committee approved a "Declaration and By-Laws," which provided for the new chairman of the executive committee to name a "steering committee," among other things. Mr. Pickett last week properly named that committee for the Democratic party, as the By-Laws required.

The committee also voted for the successful party nominees to serve as a "steering committee" for the coming November campaign... period.

The editorial's point about an "unwritten opinion" by the attorney general escapes us, since any lawyer knows such an opinion is just as good as a "written opinion" by the same man, if it is factual.

Anyway, a majority of the committee elected an Administration man to a committee vacancy created by the death of Mr. Lewis E. Smith. He died after his name went on the July 11 primary ballot for voting within Virginia Beach Borough, one of seven boroughs in our city.

We presume the committee elected an Administration man because the borough voted strongly for all candidates on that side including popular Mr. Smith.

Some persons in Norfolk may want a "Breach at the Beach." But most Democrats in our city, whether on the United or Administration sides, favor continuing the Boom at the Beach. And loyal Democrats should support their party nominees.

We would say the same about some local Republicans, who also want Virginia Beach to remain independent.

Past Recalled

Dear Editor:

I recently visited an old neighbor, Mrs. A. A. Booth of Virginia Beach Boulevard, and she told me that you had published a picture which she believed was the one enclosed. (Feb. 23, 1967 edition)

My father was the first chief of police of Virginia Beach, and we were the first family to occupy the old Town Hall. We moved in there July 4, 1907.

I remember attending first grade in the court room in the Town Hall and having holidays whenever court was held. The upper grades were held in the lodge room.

The Town Hall also contained the jail, and the volunteer fire apparatus that was propelled by the volunteer firemen--no horses were used. Our apartment was on the second floor with the lodge room and the court room, jail and fire apparatus on the first floor. If I remember correctly the mayor at that time was a Mr. Holland, (Bernard Peabody Holland).

My father and mother, two brothers (S. Moore and Thomas Walters Warden) and myself came to the Beach in June, 1907, and had rooms with Mr. Griggs, the judge at the time, and stayed there until the Town Hall was ready to be occupied.

My father was constable of Princess Anne County for 20 years before he accepted the position as chief of police at Virginia Beach in the spring of 1907. He was a native of Indian Creek in Norfolk County (St. Brides Post Office).

Our family settled in Virginia (Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties) in the early part of the 17th century. I recently verified this fact from the old records at the City of Chesapeake Court House.

I am the only remaining member of our immediate family, but we have many relatives in the area. My father is buried at the Old Eastern Shore Chapel which was at Oceana and now is on Laskin Road. Two of my three brothers are buried there also.

Frances Warden Hill

Vocational School

Dear Editor:

All densely populated areas ranging from 300,000 to 500,000 inhabitants should have in its educational complex an efficient vocational education plant.

Our best authority on this subject recommends a population large enough to financially support a completely diversified vocational plant. This is by no means an inexpensive phase of education if it is to be efficiently operated.

One of the earliest and very efficient school of this type can be seen in Newark, N.J. This is the Essex County Vocational School.

We are fortunate in having two rapidly growing cities side by side. If Norfolk and Virginia Beach would clasp hands on this project they could come up with a winner.

The financial picture could be very promising with the two cities sharing the load. It is hoped that this project can be a credit to the area and spare the disappointment of mediocrity.

Mad at Stories

Dear Editor:

I haven't lived in Virginia Beach too long, but I became interested in the Democratic party in the primary election in July. I have since then been trying to stay abreast of Virginia Beach politics, and I read the R. Staples letter in this week's Sun about Norfolk's newspapers picking on Virginia Beach.

Then in the Friday Virginian Pilot I became madder when I saw two different stories contradicting. One on page 31 said Sen. William Kellam of our city "has not filed his expenses." It was a story about campaign expenses in the primary. On page 3 of the same newspaper, a story said "State Sen. William P. Kellam of Virginia Beach,

Invited

Letters are invited on all subjects. Mail them to Virginia Beach Sun, P. O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va., 23451.

$10,591 in his unsuccessful bid for nomination to a new term." This is where the story listed expense reports filed with the Board of Elections in Richmond.

For some time I have been trying to figure which newspaper to believe. Now I have started trying to figure which page to believe.

T.R. Galwing

(Editor's note: This sometimes happens in newspapers and often poses mysteries. We don't know why, but it divides community thinking.)

Litter

Dear Editor:

Please permit me to make a few remarks about the article in the SUN on Thursday, 3 August--"Litter Laws--Enforce or Ignore?"

1. Do not ignore them. If they are not enforceable as they are, either amend them or repeal them, but do not ignore them.
2. A afraid of injuring the feelings of a littering tourist? So who wants tourists to throw around beer cans and whiskey bottles? (not to mention soft drink ones as well). That type of tourist is probably more trouble than profit to businesses and authorities.
3. It is very doubtful that people who throw trash at random will read and obey signs telling them not to.
4. I repeat--do not ignore any law. Repeal it if you must; but do not ignore it.

Sun Report

Student Loans Insured for 9,468

This week's Sun Report offers excerpts from the sixth annual report of the State Education Assistance Authority of Virginia. It was created under a 1960 act of the Virginia General Assembly and is currently headed by Thomas P. Parsley of Roanoke, Va.

The authority's purpose is to help young men and women of Virginia who need to borrow money to obtain loans to secure a college or vocational education at schools within Virginia.

The annual report excerpted here is for the fiscal year which started July 1, 1966, and concluded June 30, 1967:

"The original enabling act authorized the insurance of loans to Virginia students attending STATE-SUPPORTED institutions of higher education in Virginia. The Authority operated under this plan through June 30, 1966. The 1966 General Assembly amended the act, extending the insurance of loans to PRIVATE institutions of higher education in Virginia. The Authority began operating under this new plan on July 1, 1966. At the same time, the Authority began its participation with the Office of Education in Washington to obtain Federal interest benefits for its insured student loans.

"The 1966 General Assembly amended the original act in another significant way--to insure loans to Virginia students attending vocational schools in this State. "Accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or by a State agency designated by the Governor," The Board of the Authority in February 1967 voted to extend our insurance of student loans to those attending vocational schools, properly accredited, such schools also being approved by the Office of Education for payment of interest by the Federal Government. The insurance of vocational loans becomes effective July 1, 1967.

"As of July 1, 1966, the maximum amount of insured loans to any one undergraduate student was increased from $750 to $1,000 per academic year. As of that date also our insurance of the principal of loans was raised from 80% to 90%.

"We have now 9,468 Virginians attending Virginia colleges who have been assisted by having loans insured..."

129 Banks Participate

"There are 246 commercial banks in Virginia. Of these, 129 have signed participating agreements with SEAA. One Federal Savings and Loan Association has become a participant, including branches, but counting only one office of a bank in any one city or town, on June 30, 1967 there were 297 banks and branches in 196 Virginia communities participating in our insured student loan program.

"Loans to students attending 69 institutions of higher education (and their affiliates) are eligible for insurance by this Authority to the extent of 90% of principal. According to our understanding, 56 of these have been approved by the Office of Education for payment of interest by the Federal Government on their student loans.

"During the six years of this program, 16,555 loans for $10,444,312 face amount have been insured. Of these, 3,476 loans for $1,849,578 have been paid in full. Hundreds of other loans are being paid in monthly installments.

"There have been 60 borrowers who have defaulted, on whose loans the Authority has paid $37,679 under insurance commitments. The defaulted notes are turned over to an attorney for collection, and $5,221 net recoveries have been made to date."

'One of Nineteen States'

"Virginia is one of nineteen states which have made appropriations for guaranteeing student loans. Operations in other states are conducted by private agencies. Some of the guarantee funds have run out. The U. S. Commissioner of Education has expressed his intent to inaugurate the Federal guaranty program in states where state funds are exhausted. "Advance funds" were made available under the Higher Education Act of 1965 to help states with their insurance reserves. Virginia was informed last fall that $290,030 "Advance funds" would be available to us for the purpose stated. We have obtained $122,701 from the Office of Education to add to our guaranty fund. This must be repaid, of course, at some future date.

"On June 30, 1967, the make-up of the Trust Fund for the guaranty of student loans was as follows:

Appropriated by the State of Virginia	$500,000
Insurance Fees Collected	182,086
Interest on Investments	55,931
Total	$738,017
LESS:
Disbursements Under Insurance Commitments	$37,679
Net Recoveries on Defaulted Loans	5,221
Total Trust Fund	$705,560
Funds Advanced by Office of Education	122,701
Total Guaranty Funds	$828,261

Some SEAA loans have 80% insurance and (since 7/1/66) some have 90% insurance. The total funds shown above can support the insurance of $3,585,080 additional loans..."

"The demand for student loans increased materially during the year just ended, as tuition and other educational costs advanced. Two other factors contributed to the larger volume of loans insured by SEAA--the payment of Federal interest benefits and the inclusion of PRIVATE institutions in our approved list for insurance of loans. There will be no statement of demand for student loans during the coming year. Students attending approved vocational schools will be added to potential borrowers. Just how much the volume will actually increase will depend upon the condition of the money market and the willingness of the participating lending institutions to make these loans.

"More lenders are needed in Virginia. Also, the lenders should be better compensated for the tremendous amount of record-keeping which is necessary, and for the long time they must wait for full repayment of loans.

"On the whole, Virginia can be proud of the way it is assisting worthy youngsters to secure higher education."

Orange Sticker Can Light Way For Someone Who Is Blind

A small orange sticker on a driver's permit could mean the difference between sight and darkness to a blind person, whether in Virginia Beach or elsewhere.

The stickers, available from the Old Dominion Eye Bank in Richmond, Va., or J. E. Wright here, are a tangible sign of charitable work by Lions clubs in Virginia Beach and other cities.

The eight clubs in the city support the Eye Bank, and their members have donor cards which go to persons who want to will their eyes to the bank.

When ambulance drivers and rescue squadmen see the orange sticker on the drivers permit of a person who dies in a fatal accident, they contact the Eye Bank.

James E. Fridley, a local man who is governor of District 24-D of the Lions, said all clubs in Virginia Beach support the Eye Bank.

The clubs and their presidents are:

Aragona-Pembroke, Moritz Gundersen; Bayside, George C. Freeman; Kempsville, Shelton J. Belandis; Oceana, Daniel J. Aris; Plaza Golden, William I. Meyers; Princess Anne, Edward A. Koster; Thalia, A. C. Clark, and Virginia Beach (Host), Walter J. Pankiewicz.

Other articles have been taken from cars, both locked and unlocked. Several persons reported suitcases stolen.

One motel in particular has been plagued by thefts of tires and equipment from cars parked in the motel lot. Records show 15 thefts in four days.

Another angle is the thief who tells the desk clerk he had left something in a room and gets the clerk to unlock the door. Several thefts like this have been reported.

Tourists have not been the only victims. Local residents swimming or surfing at the beach have reported thefts from their cars and from the beach itself. According to Capt. Davis, persons should leave all valuables at home before coming to the beach.

Bull Gets Title

The registered Guernsey bull Bayville Royal Astor, has been named a Gold Star Sire by the American Guernsey Cattle Club.

"Astor" was bred by Bayville Farms, Inc., and is now owned by Oregon State University, Astoria.

Citizens Ask Pentagon Help for Beach Center

VIRGINIA BEACH BOROUGH --A group seeking a permanent location for the Hospitality House for service men and women has decided to ask the Pentagon for financial support in acquiring a place.

A suggestion that a community center be incorporated into plans for a permanent Hospitality House was rejected by the Hospitality House Citizens Committee at its meeting Thursday, Aug. 10.

Algy Cohen had told the committee he understood that the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Department would provide 70 per cent of the funds for a community center. This would include more than a center for service men and women.

Harold Whitehurst, director of the City's Parks and Recreation Department, pointed out a neighborhood community house would require a central location in greater Virginia Beach.

"The main attraction of the Hospitality House is the beach," he said, speaking of the Virginia Beach Borough area.

The Committee agreed that the first question to be decided is a location. They decided to put in a request to the U.S. Defense Department for aid from recreation funds. The request will have to be made through commanding officers in the area, said Richard J. Webbon, City Coordinator of urban affairs.

State Sen. William P. Kellam had said at an earlier meeting that the federal government should help in acquiring a location for the Hospitality House for enlisted personnel.

Several sites were discussed Thursday, then a committee was appointed to get basic information on a location. Appointees were Cohen, Albin Mailhes, R. Bradshaw Pulley and Roger Scott.

According to Larry White, manager of the Hospitality House, 3,457 service men signed the register there in July. He agreed with others that the facility should be open only during the summer months.

The men come here for Changing Signs On Trailways 'In the Family'

Almost everyone in Virginia Beach is familiar with Carolina Trailways which provides the city with mass transportation bus service. But some people might do a double take on seeing a Continental Trailways or New England Trailways bus pass by.

They all belong to the same family--Trailways. Individual companies are affiliated with Trailways to form a nationwide bus system. There are many small companies in the system.

Agreement among the member companies allows them to use each others' terminals and equipment.

Cooperative Picks Frost

Ralph L. Frost of Back Bay was named president of the board of directors of the Southern States Cooperative at the annual membership meeting held Aug. 3 in Chesapeake.

Ray E. Newman of Princess Anne was elected to the board of directors, and Mrs. R.H. DeFord of DeFord Road was elected to the Farm Home Advisory Committee.

Frost was chosen as a delegate to represent the local membership at the Southern States Cooperative's 44th Annual Stockholders Meeting in Louisville, Ky., this fall. He will also be a delegate to a District Election meeting to be held in Petersburg, Va., this fall. W.W. Oliver of Virginia Beach was named as alternate.

Reynolds Boosts Currie in Sales

A former Virginia Beach resident, Thomas R. Currie, has been promoted from assistant to assistant director of sales training and development for Reynolds Metals Company in Richmond, Va.

David P. Reynolds, executive vice president for sales, recently announced that Currie succeeds Cloyd S. Steinmetz, named assistant to the president of Reynolds Aluminum Sales Company.

NOT RARE

-but valuable!

A Mutual Federal Savings Passbook is no rare item among steady savers. They value it for the dependability and convenience it affords.

- lets you add or withdraw funds as you please.
- you know your balance and earnings at a glance.
- passbooks require no big minimum balance.
- no need to tie up your savings for a long time.
- a lost passbook can be replaced quite easily.
- add to, or withdraw from, your account by mail.
- borrow against savings, still earn dividends.

It's a rare family that doesn't occasionally wish they had formed the habit of steady saving. That's when a Mutual Federal passbook is most valuable.

Buzzers, Bells to Sound At 40 Schools on Sept. 7

With the beginning of classes in Virginia Beach public schools Sept. 7, the school system will have a total of 40 schools—32 elementary and eight secondary.

There will be 1,559 teachers filling classroom positions, including supervisors, principals and administrative positions. The school system staff will be more than 1,600 persons. Enrollment is expected to be approximately 38,500.

Scheduled to open in September are two new elementary schools in the Princess Anne Plaza area—Brookwood, next to Plaza Elementary, and Holland on Holland Road.

Also expected to be completed are 10-classroom and science laboratory additions to Kellam and Bayside High Schools. Major improvements in the heating system, walls and floors are being made at Union-Kempsville High School this summer.

Census Counts Local Smokers

Mrs. Audrey L. Hayden of Windy Ridge Point is conducting a survey of smoking habits this week for the Census Bureau.

In addition to the questions on smoking habits of the population asked for the U.S. Public Health Service, the August survey will include labor force information for use by the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics in determining the national employment and unemployment figures for August.

All information provided to the Census Bureau is confidential and the facts obtained will be used only for statistical purposes. The same information will be sought from all households in the survey throughout the U.S.

and should be finished later in the fall.

Other additions include a library at Linkhorn Park Elementary and a gymnasium at Seatack Elementary. Bleachers and field houses are being added to Kempsville, First Colonial and Bayside high schools.

Two schools are not planned for opening until 1969. One will be the proposed vocational-technical training center and the other is a high school to serve the Princess Anne Plaza area. Plans for them are now in process.

A

School-Free Society

By Jeanne Magee Tucker
Women's Editor

School's out... boys can be barefoot boys again... girls can be mini-minded... teachers can be book-less. Even the commuters can have a couple of weeks of smoother mobility... they can vroom down the whole length of The Boulevard without seeing a single big, yellow school bus.

Have You Noticed.....

... that there were lots and lots of big, yellow school buses this summer? Whether of necessity or by choice, summer classes were IN... the area around those schools in session for the summer were almost as busy and congested as during the school year.

... too, that the area around the local drive-in hamburger boxes seems to be a little more litter-free than heretofore? Maybe beautification has finally gotten through to them. Let's hope the Now neatness lasts.

More Woning: Summer Signs.....

... the bulging back-to-school departments in the stores. Fortunately, we've been spared another year: the youngest is still too mite-sized for the Villagers and the John Meyers... she's of a mind for them but we're not of a purse for them just yet. Happily, I can rest a little easier for another year, I hope.

... the outdoor furniture from which we coaxed another year... finally on its last legs, literally... and one of those glued together.

... ditto the funny, old crabbing boat. It sprang a pencil-sized leak and we used just that to plug it... but it still has pin-sized leaks throughout... so the pencil's almost like a swizzle stick in a drink.

... the dog's back home... after several days vacationing in the next block. She led us a merry chase from one shore to the other while we drove back and forth. We were like letters crossing in the mail.

... the delicious colors that come to the table... the yellows, the greens, the reds. Fortunately for us, our neighbor's late summer corn crop was not lost in the heavy rains after all. It took a while of a beating at a time when it appeared to be too young for even heavy dew, but it sprang back, is now tall and straight and strong. To find a basket of it on my doorstep is enough to make me forget that bikini I'm trying to slim down to.

... Mary Sigillo doesn't help. When we get together to work on her story, there are always a couple of plates of goodies nestled among the papers, pictures and scrapbooks.

Oh, well, I cheated a little when I bought the bikini... I made sure I had an overdress... just in case the weather turns cool you know.

doesn't smoke, drinks little (I'm not of legal age anyway), and "eats like a horse."

"I really love to cook. I especially like to create artistic desserts and things like that."

"My father makes the most scrumptious concoctions but I've got to watch it. I don't have to diet exactly, but I do have to firm up a bit."

"My parents are great fun. (See Miss Va. Beach Page 3B)

Her future plans are indefinite. She doesn't believe in going to school just for the sake of being there. Instead, she wants to set a definite course... and until she is absolutely sure what that will be, she's decided to bide her time. Having the title will help considerably.

"All I know at this time is that it will be music, the theater or something in that field."

The new Miss Virginia Beach

in Pembroke Manor. Not wanting to waken them, she spoke in whisper tones.

"I'm 18 and the oldest; Kathy is 16 and Lonnie is 14. The three boys are Stephen, 6, Timmy, 4, and Richie, almost three."

Her father is a Naval Commander who has been in this area since Bobbie was in the eighth grade; she graduated from Princess Anne just last June.

but since it was such a big event, I just wanted to have it done.

Fortunately it pleased her... as she obviously pleased the judges.

"I never tease it, so it's taken until now to get it back to where I can get a brush through it."

Three of the six little Chullis were still asleep on the second floor of the family home

She had just finished brushing out her long dark hair, mentioned laughingly that she was still having difficulty getting out all the hair spray that held it in place for the previous Friday night's Miss Virginia Beach pageant in the Civic Center.

She never has it done, she said, but for the pageant she decided to give a professional hairstyle a whirl.

"I knew I was taking a chance,

When a girl looks as much the beauty queen in a kitchen as she does on the runway, then you have, indeed, the answer to why she's the crown's owner.

At an hour when queens of almost any type would still be dreaming of empires that reach to the moon, Bobbie (for Barbara) Chullis was dressed, made up, and in heels and hose ready for the day. She even opened the door herself.

A Train Ride to Torture

We left, by car, to a railroad station. I was with two Gestapos in civilian clothes. They told me that we were going by train, that I was not to ask any questions or talk to anyone or even look at anyone. If I did they would kill me. I was not handcuffed, except when I was alone.

I thought of trying somehow to get away or make contact, but always in the back of my mind was my mother... and my friends whom I did not want to get involved.

So we boarded the train. I was placed beside one Gestapo with the other one facing me. We traveled first class... on red cushions.

The conductor came over. Remember, this is the French section of Belgium. They are patriots. He said, Your ticket, Miss.

I looked at him and said, Monsieur, Je suis une prisonnier (I am a prisoner). With that I got a shove in my back, but the conductor said to them, Well, You pay for her.

The Gestapo said, We don't pay. They showed their cards very fast. I didn't see them. As the conductor left he glanced at me, and I glanced at him.

I was thinking, What is await-

American-born Mary Sigillo was brought up in Belgium. As a teen-ager, she witnessed that country's invasion by the Nazis, saw many of her Belgian countrymen turn collaborator to save their own lives.

One of her countrymen-turned-traitor betrayed Mary and her fiancé, Arthur Libre, who were members of the underground movement that flourished throughout war-torn Europe.

Now a Virginia Beach resident, Mary Sigillo (her maiden name) tells her story. In her own words, to the Virginia Beach Sun.

Though she has been in concentration camps for some time, she is now being transferred to another. The sixth installment follows.

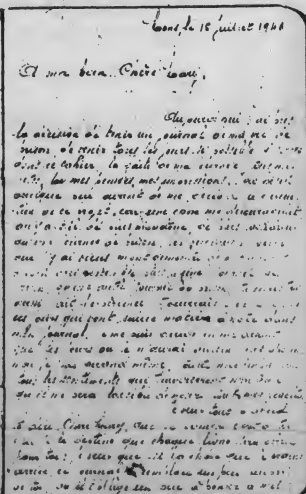

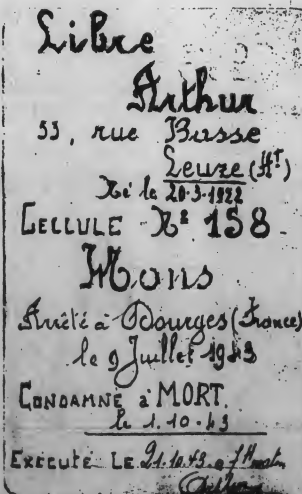

ing me? The Gestapo said, We warned you not to talk... it better not happen again. I felt safe as long as I was on that train but wondered what was in store for me.

I still had nothing to eat. I had not eaten since the night before. We had no breakfast and nothing but a small piece of bread at noon.

One of the Gestapo pulled a pear out of his pocket. They took turns eating it. I looked (See A Woman's Story Page 3 B)

Arthur's books written in Prison

Quoted from June 1945 by the present book school by Arthur.

During his imprisonment, Arthur Libre carefully recorded his experiences in two journals. The journals, dramatic mementoes of the period her fiancé spent in Nazi concentration camps, were given to Mary after the war.

What's a picnic without a ball game? It was gals against guys and with action like this Riding for a fall; Eagles' vice president, Bob Pierce.

It was Sunday in the park for Virginia Beach Eagles, who staged their annual family outing in Redwing Park. They played ball, pitched horseshoes, dunked in a make-shift water hole, chose up sides for a tug of war and ate mounds of hot dogs. They came early and stayed late, wound up the day making plans for a still bigger and better family outing for next year.

Happenings!

An annual outing, a concert, a farewell tea . . . all Happenings that say it's summertime at the Beach and Beach people have no intention of letting it go by without enjoying every minute of it.

Whether it's the Civic Center, Redwing Park, or a cool, calm expanse of lawn . . . it's the people who bring the spot to life, who make an occasion a Happening.

(SUN PHOTOS)

..... guess who won!

Another Happening this one with music.

A concert in the Civic Center one recent Saturday night . . . a Happening arranged by radio station WVAB featuring Peter Nero. A musical Happening that should happen more often.

Despite the rain . . . the crowds came . . . a good indication that there are still those who find that music without psychedelic side effects still hath charms . . . can still fill the air without shaking loose the rafters.

It's Still a Man's World Bayside Jrs. Lose a President

The Bayside Juniors have lost a brand-new president.

Mrs. Thomas Caffery who just this spring took over leadership of the group is married to a man whose company thinks he should become their Southeast Regional Director based in Atlanta, Ga. So a move is in order in the Caffery household, as well as in the Bayside Junior Women's Club.

Moving in as president will be Mrs. M. F. Wallace, former vice president. Taking over in Mrs. Wallace's spot will be Mrs. Don Cameron, at whose home Bayside Juniors honored their departing president with an afternoon tea.

Mrs. Caffery was honored also with the presentation to her of the president's pin, a presentation which normally doesn't occur until the president has served her term.

The Cafferys will leave the area some time this week.

Mrs. McCaffery (third from left) is shown with several members of the Chesapeake Beach Woman's Club who were special guests at the tea in her honor. From left are Mrs. Edward A. Hudson, Mrs. Harry W. Fulford, president, and Mrs. Ray A. Arnold.

Mrs. McCaffery (standing) is a president on the move. With her are Mrs. Henry B. Slough, Mrs. Henry C. Roberson Jr. and Mrs. Don I. Cameron.

A Woman's Story

at them eating it. I was not only hungry I was thirsty. They asked me if I wanted a piece of pear. I said no. So they continued eating, smacking their lips and when they came to the core they ate right down to the core until there was absolutely nothing left. They handed me the core with the stem and said, Eat it! I had to eat that stem, I ate it. I was a woman against two men.

I knew then if I had shouted on that trolley car that these two men were Belgian traitors the people would have killed them. That's how the people were. But my family, again I had to think of them. There just didn't seem to be any way out.

I was nauseated to think that here were traitors and here I was. An American fighting for the freedom of a country of my mother's country and it was Belgians who had arrested me. It was a Belgian who had squealed on me!

I was taken to a building, well-known to anyone who's been in concentration camps because it was a place that prisoners often were taken when they were confined to die.

I was put in a cellar... at one time most likely a wine cellar. It was very small and there was fresh blood on the wall. I began to pray. I felt that this was it. I took a pin and on one of the bricks in that cellar I wrote, Adieu Mama... good-bye mother... because really and truly I felt that they were going to kill me. Still no food.

Next day my cell door was opened. It was still very dark but they had come for me. I was taken upstairs and put into a truck. There were three other prisoners. We drove to Aisace, where they dropped off the other three, and we continued on to another building. With still no food I was taken through a door and pushed into another cellar. This one reminded me of a locker. It was the height of a man and the width of a man. A man could stand in it, not straight if he is tall, but you can't sit because you haven't room. So you stand, slightly bent over with your head bent down a bit. That's the only position you can be in. It is now going on my third night of being on the move without food.

he walked with me to a door. Now this is all in prison, mind you. He rang a bell, such as you would ring for food. The door opened and in front of me stood a Catholic Nun.

He said, Mother, this child hasn't eaten since Tuesday. Take care of her. Then he left.

I looked at the sister and I said, Sister, are you Belgian or are you German.

She said, I am Belgian.

For the first time since my arrest I broke down. I cried and I sobbed, because, even though I had spoken to my brother, and though I had heard the voice of Arthur's mother, it was not an arm that had been put around my shoulder.

Next Week: A Nun becomes a confidante, Mary goes to trial, and a letter comes from Arthur.

Fall Rites Are Planned

Thomas Rose Engaged To Patricia Sullivan

Thomas Hadley Rose of this city and Patricia Sullivan of Woodstock will marry in the fall.

Their engagement was announced in Woodstock by her mother, Mrs. Jane Sullivan.

Mr. Rose, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard T. Rose of Linkhorn Drive, is a graduate of Virginia Beach High School. He attended Virginia Polytechnical Institute in Blacksburg.

His fiancée is a graduate of Roanoke College in Salem.

The wedding will take place in Woodstock.

I really like them.

"My father is of Italian descent, my mother is Polish... so when you get the two entirely different personalities and temperaments together, it's really something.

"When I indicated a desire to smoke, my father bought me a pack of cigarettes. I smoked them but didn't like them so I haven't smoked since.

"Same thing with drinking. I have no objection to either smoking or drinking but believe that you should use discretion with both.

"My father gave me a glass of wine with dinner some time ago. I see no harm whatsoever in social drinking if you know how to use it.

I guess I'm pretty old-fashioned. I still want to listen to my parents and wish I could be of more help to them. I really do.

"I believe that all young people today want to listen to their parents, but we still just want to make our own decisions.

"With fashions, too, I'm kind of a mixture... half old-fashioned, half modern.

"I don't like extreme clothes. I think a woman should look feminine, but I also don't like to see her in a dress that is too long. That looks awkward.

"I like a classic look, but one that is young and casual." Last year, her senior year in high school, Bobbie had a part time job that paid her enough to buy all her own clothes.

"I guess I really started buying my own little by little at the beginning of high school, but last summer and last year I really was able to buy them all.

"I splurged and bought a few rather expensive things, but I'm not sorry. Now I feel that I have an almost-new wardrobe to see me through this year."

Then she was off to a 10 a.m. appointment at John Robert Powers Charn School where she's enrolled in the full and complete course.

What she'll get should firm her up, smooth what, if any, rough edges there are, teach her how to make her dark eyes appear darker still and how to glide instead of walk. The voice she can handle.

It's bell-clear, throaty and made to order for her choice of song for her talent presentation in the pageant. She's had no voice training.

"The ballad on Kennedy's assassination is one that appealed to me particularly. I had played the record over and over so much that I knew it very well.

"I'm afraid of politics... I'm very emotional, and the President's death had an unbelievable effect on me.

"So this song really made such an impression on me that I decided to sing it for the contest.

"I am happy if others liked it, too."

The next morning they opened up that locker and I fell out. I had no feeling in my legs.... I really didn't feel them. I wasn't even hungry any more. I actually felt nothing. If I remember correctly, I nearly crawled up the stairs when I was taken out and to the bathroom. I washed, combed my hair and came back down. They said that I was going to a prison and that they would see me shortly. They were Belgians.

In a Gestapo car they drove me to the prison. As we entered an office, a clerk took my little bag with my ring, my medals... everything that I had, little as it was. I heard the two say to a German, She's in your hands, and they left.

The German was a round-faced man who sort of reminded me of a father. He asked where I'd come from. I said since Tuesday I've been without food. This was Friday. I told him I was taken from Mons to Brussels, from Brussels to Ghent where I spent the night in a locker, and here I am.

He said, You poor child. After he took down all the information,

'Pure Corn' Pops Hit On Wedgewood Stage

Pure corn is what it is, but the current production of "Riverwind" at Wedgewood Dinner Theatre pops the corn to best advantage and comes up with a delightful evening of musical comedy.

"Riverwind" is not a musical in the accepted sense of the word. There are no brassy production numbers with lots of chorus girls. In fact the entire tightly-knit cast is made up of only seven Wedgewood experts.

The action takes place at Riverwind, a Class "Z" tourist resort on the banks of the Wabash. But to those involved, Riverwind becomes a place of awakening and reawakening.

Louise and Fred Sumner, married 17 years, arrive to revisit the spot where they spent their wedding night. All is not well in their marriage, and Louise hopes that Riverwind can remedy that. It is perfectly obvious it will, but the teenage daughter of the owner plays an important part in the foregoing conclusion.

Virginia and Burt, who have "been together" for six, or is it seven, years, are recurring guests at Riverwind. Burt is a professional student, who someday plans to marry Virginia when he finishes his Ph.D.

Book Selects Two Locally

Two local professionals have been selected to appear in the 1967 edition of Outstanding Personalities of the South.

Mrs. Anna M. Rhodes, of Heron Point Circle is the 1967 Virginia Teacher of the Year. Currently, Mrs. Rhodes is an elementary supervisor in the Virginia Beach public school system.

Alfred W. Craft Jr. of 48th Street is a lifetime native of Virginia Beach. Craft is a Vice-president of First and Merchants Bank.

'Elephants' Up for Sale

VIRGINIA BEACH BOROUGH--Virginia Beach Elk Lodge No. 2268 and its auxiliary will sponsor their annual White Elephant Sale on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 19 and 20, at the former R. K. Chevrolet location on the 17th Street end of Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Ted Beasley, chairman and director for the sale, said proceeds from the sale, all day both days, will go toward such Elk charities as a boys' camp, Christmas help for the needy and a building fund.

"We're not going to have any junk," Beasley said of the items to be sold. He added that anyone who wants to donate good appliances or "knick nacks" can call him at 340-6710.

R.K. Chevrolet recently opened a new sales and service plant at the future "Center on Wheels" on Virginia Beach Boulevard, between London Bridge and Lynnhaven.

Ron Reid, plays the amorous, would-be professor broadly. His rendition of the clever song, "American Family Plan" along with Sandra McClung, is one of the high moments of the show.

Miss McClung, with her nasal twang, her outlandish costumes and her lack of any inhibitions, comes up with another remarkable characterization. She plays the role absolutely straight-faced, which makes it believable, but badly overplays one scene, which almost destroys what she has been striving to do.

Miss McClung does double duty as choreographer, and comes up with a great deal of exciting dance movement.

Frank and Arden Staroba play the arguing Sumners to perfection. Mrs. Staroba's rendition of the too-sweet title song is a fine experience. Her portrayal of the devoted wife is excellent. Frank Staroba has a thankless role as the doctor who takes his wife for granted, but he makes it into a memorable performance.

Ginger Montague plays the sweet young thing nicely, but the surprise of the evening is newcomer David Page, who plays her tongue-tied boyfriend. He shows promise as a fine actor and his tenor voice is outstanding.

JOSEPH LOWENTHAL, JR.

Skipper Bridges Gap

Capt. Wynn V. Whidden, a Virginia Beach man who is skipper of the USS Randolph, is bridging problems of understanding between some enlisted men and the ship's bridge.

Whidden has started a program of inviting men in the engine room below decks to the bridge two at a time, to observe shiphandling procedures.

When commands such as "all ahead full," or "all stop" go from the bridge to the engine room, the men receiving the commands will better understand why they must react swiftly, as a result of their visits to the bridge.

So-Called 'Fees' Out for Elementaries

This September parents of elementary school children in Virginia Beach will not be faced with paying so-called materials "fees" so familiar to most of them when schools open.

The School Board last spring approved the City's providing all supplementary materials, for which some parents in the past had to pay in advance.

Students in the high schools in the coming school year will buy their books and pay fees

School Supt. Frank Cox commented that the cost of providing all text books "would be prohibitive."

Sun Interview

Recreation Goal Is 'Something For All'

(Harold Whitehurst, city parks and recreation director, has played a leading role in the development of parks and recreation facilities in greater Virginia Beach's seven boroughs. The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN in a recent interview asked him a series of questions presented here with his replies.)

Question: What is the overall concept for the city's parks and recreation program?

Answer: "Recreation plays a key role in a livable city. We'd like to have some activity for every age, in every season."

Question: Has the development of the program since the merger of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County on Jan. 1, 1963, been as fast as you would like?

Answer: "You couldn't expect it to go much quicker. We're progressing on the master plan. Another four years like the last four would be tremendous."

Question: What recreation changes are planned for the city's residents within the next year?

Answer: "We'll be developing the Plaza park (in Princess Anne Plaza). It will be a walk-in type park on a small scale, something like Red Wing Park. We'd like to develop the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway Park (at the east end of the expressway near Virginia Beach Junior High School). We have three school playgrounds to standards. New recreation classes will be offered where there's interest."

Question: How much has your staff increased the last four and one half years?

Answer: "I guess there were three or four on the staff in 1963. Now there are 18 in maintenance, and five full-time in the recreation program. That doesn't count the 70 or so part-time teachers who help us. Without the availability of the schools and the teachers, our program would be impossible."

Question: What is the number one problem in recreation in Virginia Beach?

Answer: "Keeping pace with the growth of the city."

Question: What changes are planned for tourists and other visitors to Virginia Beach within the next year?

Answer: "As I said, the Expressway park would be used by tourists. The tennis courts are used by all. Band concerts have been started. Having things close to the beach may keep them there on cloudy days. Having good facilities for them to use helps the tourists and the city both."

Whitehurst at Home

Harold S. Whitehurst, judging from his manner and accomplishments, is a man completely "sold" on his job with the city government of greater Virginia Beach.

The 40-year-old native of Norfolk and twin brother of that city's commonwealth's attorney, Alfred W. Whitehurst, looks after children while his brother prosecutes criminals.

Harold Whitehurst is director of the Parks and Recreation Department, a post he has held since 1963, when old Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County merged into today's city. Prior to then, he was recreation director for the county about six years.

He also has long directed physical education for the city's growing public school system. In Virginia Beach, school grounds and activities are an integral part of the city's parks and recreation program.

Whitehurst is a graduate of Norfolk's Maury High, attended extension classes of the College of William & Mary, and earned bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina College in the early 1950's.

Before coming to Virginia Beach late in that decade, he taught at Blair Junior High, Crossroads Elementary and old Broad Creek Elementary schools in Norfolk.

He and his wife, the former Dorothy Jane Potas of Pittsburgh, Pa., live on North Alanton Drive in Lynnhaven Borough. They have a 4-year-old daughter and are members of the First Baptist Church.

Pungo Boy Saves 2 from Flames

By Carolyn McAllen

Pungo.

PRINCESS ANNE BOROUGH--"I saw the flames and just ran in," said Alva Garrett Jr., 14, of his quick actions in saving two younger boys from possible serious injury in a garage fire recently.

Alva, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Garrett Sr. of Pungo, said he was returning from the store on his bicycle when he saw a gasoline can ignite in the garage of the J. T. Powell home in

"The boys (Gary Powell, 10, and Teddy Powell, 12) were hitting caps with a hammer to make them explode. A spark must have ignited the gasoline," said Alva. "I didn't have time to think. I just grabbed a bag, wet it and started beating the fire out."

He modestly said he had a "little" fire training as a Boy Scout. He has been in scouting for three years and is a member of Troop 433, sponsored by the Court House Volunteer Fire Department. He is just going into Explorer Post 475.

One of the boys, Gary, received second and third degree burns on his leg.

Alva will be in the eighth grade at Kellam High School this September.

What's That You Say?

On top of, under, around and through the Steel Pier at the south end of Virginia Beach Borough will be many people from all parts of the United States. They will be speaking a language known only to the elite set of surfers as they watch surfers perform.

The East Coast Surfing Championship Aug. 26 and 27 will be the event.

While one "hodad" (shoff surfer) may be "shooting the curl" (riding a wave) while "hanging ten" (having ten toes over the nose of the board), a "gremlin" (beginning surfer) might have a real "wipe out" (to fall off the board or get pushed off by a wave) on a gigantic "tuber" (a wave that forms a hollow tube in the middle).

Alva Garrett

To be completed sometime in November of this year, he said.

Among the features of what school officials describe as a "highly-sophisticated" school is a team-teaching type plan so teachers can teach by subject material rather than classrooms. Teachers, rather than students, would change rooms.

Included will be four seminar rooms, a planetarium, nine science labs, two teacher planning centers, 26 teacher offices, 25 standard classrooms, a student activities room, a special lab for long-term science projects and a language lab and reading clinic.

The school, which will serve students from Princess Anne Plaza and surrounding areas, is expected to cost $2.5 million.

Beach Officials Blast Daily Paper on Economy

Public and private officials in greater Virginia Beach have sharply challenged a daily newspaper's interpretation of how the city's economy is doing.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN: "I don't know how anyone can suggest the city is showing a sluggish trend economically. The facts do not bear this out."

He was referring to a headlined story "Beach Economy Sluggish" in the Aug. 21 issue of The Virginian-Pilot of neighboring Norfolk.

The daily newspaper story allegedly was based on an economic report which City Council received on the first half of 1967. Since at least July 1, the city's economy has been strong.

George Davis, president of the Virginia Beach Innkeepers, said he "certainly wouldn't call it sluggish," speaking only of the tourism aspect of the city's economy.

He added, "Every indication is this year will be at least on a par with 1966, which was our best year of record. Some establishments report business this year is running ahead of the same period for last year."

When Hatchett was commenting on The Virginian-Pilot's interpretation of the report, he said a leading businessman in the city told him business is running 25 per cent ahead of last year's level.

Some hotels and motels had a slow beginning in Virginia Beach Borough, one of seven city boroughs, Hatchett said. But they are reporting more business in late summer, Hatchett added.

The economic report which City Council received recently said, among other things for the first half of 1967:

"We will probably end up with a better year in dollar value in building in 1967 than in 1966" on construction in all of the city's boroughs.

The city report mentioned a revenue loss, but in relation to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, where truck traffic in particular dropped off the first half of this year, compared to the number of trucks in 1966.

The city report, prepared by economist Fitzhugh Newsome, also said "several banking interests" agree there is "slightly better than a 50-50 chance" the 1968 Virginia General Assembly will raise the legal interest ceiling to 7 per cent.

North Carolina recently raised interest there to that level, according to the report, to help ease the tight money situation. Virginia is one of nine states still with a 6 per cent ceiling.

'It Was Fantastic'

VIRGINIA BEACH BOROUGH--"It was fantastic, and we didn't have room for them and had to send them to other motels."

Scott Sterling, operator of the Princess Anne Inn on greater Virginia Beach's oceanfront, was talking about the flood of letters he received after the popular New York Daily News' SUNDAY NEWS on Aug. 13, 1967, promoted Virginia Beach's boardwalk resort area.

Sterling said he received 945 different inquiries in the four days after the articles on three pages were published.

They resulted from a trip to the resort area in this borough by John Hughes and his wife, Stephanie, and headlines in the travel section said "Versatile Virginia Beach", "Versatility Plus" and "You Name It, Virginia Beach Has It."

Sterling's wife, Keithley, conducted Hughes and his wife to various attractions in the resort area, including Coters, Florence Wilson Fashions, Eden Alley, "The Wolfgang," Rose Hall, and the 5th annual East Coast Surfing Championship, set for the coming weekend, Aug. 26-27, and Seashore

State Park.

Sterling said inquiries as a result of the promotion came in from Chicago, New Jersey, and other areas outside of the New York immediate area.

He credited "the city government's advertising program" with helping get the publicity for Virginia Beach.

Lehigh Joins SUN Staff

Les Lehigh

Les Lehigh, veteran news reporter, has joined the staff of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN and will specialize in police and fire reporting, as well as special writing.

The 40-year-old newsman, who said he joined the SUN staff because he thinks it has "great potential in this growing region," began his new duties Monday of this week.

He has been primarily a radio newsman since coming to this area in 1958 and recently served as news director of Radio Station WNOR. As part of his duties with the SUN, Lehigh will work closely with the staff of local Radio Station WVAB (1550 k.c.).

Lehigh has interviewed such prominent persons as now-dead John F. Kennedy, before he became president, King Hussein of Jordan; Vice President Hubert Humphrey, and Secretary Robert Weaver of the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Sun's new staff member covered the 1965 sinking of the trawler "Snoopy" off the North Carolina outer banks and earned a United Press International award for that assignment. He also made a live broadcast from a Blue Angels jet plane while in the air.

He has at times been a newsman with radio stations in Rocky Mount and Tarboro, N. C., as well as with several in Norfolk.

He has served with the U. S. State Department in Paris, France, and was in the U. S. Army for two years at the end of World War II.

A native of York, Pa., Lehigh is married to the former Mary Ruth Jenkins of Rocky Mount, N. C., and they have two daughters. Lehigh is active in Moose Lodge No. 39 and is currently junior governor.

German Youth More Tolerant

By Susan Axelrod

"Women who walk on the streets with curlers in their hair" is the most offensive thing that Adelheid Schwarz has found in greater Virginia Beach since her arrival from Germany.

Adelheid is the American Field Service exchange student for First Colonial High School. The 17-year-old native of Bremen, Germany, says almost everything she has seen thus far is different from Germany.

Adelheid will enter First Colonial as a senior, to graduate with the class of '68. Yet, when she returns to Germany, she will have to attend another year of high school to graduate once more.

Germany offers thirteen years of high school for an academic diploma. "There also are vocational schools after one has completed the tenth grade, for those who wish to become engineers or the like," Adelheid said.

She is definitely a college-bound student, but the college of her choice has not been decided. Her older sister, Reinhold, who is 20, attends the University of Hamburg. She is studying to become a teacher of the deaf and dumb.

When Adelheid enters First Colonial Sept. 7, she will study American history, government, French (second year), senior English, speech and chorus.

She finds school electives there somewhat different from those at schools she has attended in Germany.

"In fifth through eleventh grades," she says, "the only elective students are allowed is a choice between studying Latin or French. I take Latin."

In the twelfth and thirteenth grades, you can have four or five elective subjects.

Adelheid thinks her parents are very tolerant compared to other German parents on the subject of dating. "Some parents won't let their daughters date until they are 16 or 17. Mine allowed me to date when I was 15."

"The new-generation Germans look to a person's inner self and do not discriminate because of their religious or personal beliefs," responded Adelheid, when asked if there is any kind of anti-Jewish feelings left in Germany.

"It is not so much a big problem any more. The older people feel guilty about what happened in World War II. We want to make friends with Israel to show that we don't want to make things like they were then."

Adelheid has six sisters and feels "right at home" with Dr. and Mrs. O. M. Wakefield, her American "parents," who have four children. The Wakefields live on East Bay Shore Drive.

Adelheid and One of "Sisters", Ianna Wakefield, Three and a Half.

Students to Arrive Via Corvette

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A 25-acre site on the east side of Princess Anne Plaza has been purchased for a new secondary school due to open in September, 1969, according to Virginia Beach School Supt. Frank W. Cox.

The wooded land is north of Silina Drive between South Lynnhaven Road and Hospital Drive. Corvette Lane will "probably" be the access street to the school, Cox said.

Price of the land was approximately $4,500 an acre, Cox said, "which sounds high until you consider land prices today."

Louis Oliver, of Oliver & Smith, architect for the school, said that plans are "going very well." The plans are expected

College Students 'Safe' to a Point

PRINCESS ANNE BOROUGH—A full time Virginia Beach college student who is keeping his grades at a "satisfactory" status does not have to worry about the military draft, according to Mrs. Page Hartley, clerk of the local Selective Service Board No. 100.

The new college-deferment rating is 2-S, which makes the student who is studying towards a baccalaureate degree makes him eligible for deferment, Mrs. Hartley said. Satisfactory status means enrolled and advancing to the next class within 12 months.

Students at area business colleges, however, are not eligible for a 2-S classification. They have, instead, a 2-A rating—an occupational deferment.

These students must have five hour day, five days a week of studies to be rated 2-A.

To be eligible for a 2-S deferment, the student must fill out an application, which is available at his college or at the local draft board office at Princess Anne Court House.

Business college students need to send in their name and selective service number to the draft board and request a deferment to become eligible for a 2-A classification.

Because of recent changes in the deferment system, the local draft board has been busy, Mrs. Hartley said. "People call all day long, and many of the boys come in to discuss their classifications."

Although she is the clerk of the board, she can only help with draft classification, not defer anyone. This is up to the board, composed of Paul N. Sutton, Allison F. Nicholson Jr., and Lewis L. Dillon, the chairman.

The August draft call for greater Virginia Beach is nine. The September call is five.

At this particular season of the year, there are several things that need doing. But after heavy rains, especially, we have to be particularly active as gardeners, or our landscapes may get an untidy look, and diseases may creep in.

Grass and weeds will need to be removed from all your beds before they get a good start. In addition, the home gardener needs to be on the lookout for insects, snails, and slugs that may be affecting flowers, and a spray for the prevention of black spot on roses needs to be applied; the home gardener needs, also, to be on the lookout for powdery mildew which may creep in on euonymus, roses and many other plants.

Sevin or Malathion is a good general insecticide to use for most chewing insects. There are various small and slugbaits available on the market. For powdery mildew, use karathane or phalan (folpet) to control it. Black spot on roses is controlled most frequently by using phalan (folpet) or maneb.

These are only a few of the chemicals that can be used for control of the various pests and diseases that affect ornamentals. There are others that can be made and are used quite effectively.

Two Help With Book

Elliot W. Shankin, of 39th Street and the Rev. J.R. Haggard of Laskin Road are among contributors to a new book, "The Incredible Victory" by Walter Lord. The book is a collection of reminiscences of the World War II Battle of Midway.

Lord is also the author of the best-selling account of the sinking of the Titanic, "A Night to Remember," and a book about Pearl Harbor, "Day of Infamy."

Safer Roads Coming for Travelers

Residents of greater Virginia Beach who do a lot of traveling by car and truck, whether for business or pleasure, will soon notice new safety measures on main highways in Virginia.

The State Department of Highways has announced new measures are being implemented to further promote safety on Virginia's roads.

New measures are being implemented to further promote safety on Virginia's roads, the Department of Highways said today.

Whenever and wherever possible, obstacles will be removed from the pavement edge in order to give motorists, who inadvertently leave the road, a chance to recover before hitting a fixed object.

The Department proposes to do this by removing signs from the edge of the pavement, whenever possible, and mounting them on nearby bridges; existing signs and light standards, where feasible, will be moved further from the pavement or placed behind nearby guardrails.

Guardrail ends will be turned down into the ground in order to eliminate the possibility that out-of-control vehicles will become impaled. Guardrails, also, are now being separated from support posts by a block of wood, to provide more cushion on impact.

Signs in the median of four-lane, divided roads, wherever possible, will be eliminated or either placed behind guardrail or made of breakaway design if essential.

The Department also plans to further ease or flatten slopes, thus eliminating steep drops and giving the motorist an opportunity to recover control of his vehicle and return safely.

Dropped lanes—a situation which occurs when the outside lane of a high-speed highway suddenly becomes an exit lane and the motorist must either take the exit or risk turning back into a through lane—have been eliminated from design plans for new construction projects for the last five years.

The procedure now is to continue all lanes past the interchange, to give the motorist who prefers not to exit ample time to maneuver safely back into a through lane.

Trucks on the Beach

Rudee Goes 'Splendidly'

VIRGINIA BEACH BOROUGH—L. Dean Curtis, city industrial development director, said "I think it's going along splendidly," when asked about the Rudee Inlet jetty project.

Large trucks and a crane are putting three sizes of stone, ranging from 1,000 pounds to 10 tons in weight, on the old north jetty to extend it seaward. Work may begin on the south jetty next week.

The construction project, expected to open the sand-choked inlet to navigation by next spring, has turned into a special attraction for visitors to the boardwalk resort area of greater Virginia Beach.

Members of the Rudee Inlet Authority, serving in an advisory capacity on the project, toured the construction site last week.

"They're dropping stone well out into the water at this point," Curtis said of construction workers on the job.

Trucks are extending the north jetty by traveling across the sandy beach on wooden mats, then traveling on stone dumped to form the growing jetty.

The north jetty will extend seaward 880 feet. A sand-trap groin will be built 562 feet into the ocean, where a 285-foot-long stone jetty will be on the south side. The channel will be 10 feet deep at mean low water, about 88 feet wide.

Langley, McDonald and Overman are engineers for the jetty project, and George T. McClan Co. and W. F. Magann Corp. are building it as a joint venture with a $608,000 contract. Stone is arriving via Norfolk Southern Railway.

Council About-Face Lowers Trailer Rates

PRINCESS ANNE BOROUGH—Virginia Beach in one City Council meeting last week went from the highest to the lowest city tax on trailer parks in the area south Hampton Roads.

The present rate in Norfolk which had the previous low, is $35 a year for a license, plus 1.15 per cent of the annual gross income, according to Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett.

In addition, he said, Norfolk taxes all trailers, except those belonging to military personnel, as personal property.

The new rate in Virginia Beach is $25 per year for a license, plus one fourth of one per cent of the gross annual income.

The license taxes are paid by the operators of trailer parks. Hatchett said owners of the trailers do not have to pay personal property taxes on them.

DAV Asks Help

Local Chapter 20, Disabled American Veterans, will have its members and young helpers selling the traditional Forget-Me-Not lapel flowers from today, Aug. 24, through Saturday in business areas of greater Virginia Beach.

Contributions to the DAV, which has 43 members in the local chapter, are used primarily to help disabled veterans and their dependents, although some money goes for a local building fund.

A spokesman for the local chapter said members will be offering the blue "remembrance" flowers at such shopping areas as Princess Anne Plaza, Pembroke Mall, Robbins Corner, Kempville and the Virginia Beach Borough resort area.

William D. Fluty Jr. is chapter adjutant, and Roy Holt is chairman of the Forget-Me-Not campaign today through Saturday, Aug. 26.

Sun Review

Bedroom Comedy Is 'Pleaser'

"Barefoot in the Park" is another Neil Simon bedroom comedy, but it must be said that it is very funny and nicely produced by Cavalier Dinner Playhouse in Norfolk.

The story concerns itself hilariously with newweds of six days who move into a New York apartment five flights up with no elevator. There are a few minor problems. The heat does not work. There is no bathtub. And there is a hole in the skylight which allows the February wind and snow inside.

In the attic above lives the much married Victor Velasco, smooth lover of beautiful women and rich foods. The action is complicated considerably when he meets the young bride's very plain mother from New Jersey. The plot is entirely predictable, but Simon provides lots of funny gag lines and twists to pave the way.

The success of the Cavalier production is based largely on the tempo pacing obviously drummed into the players by director W.R. Hicks, Jr. It moves fast and smoothly with never a dull moment.

The versatile Don Hayes plays Paul, the new husband, new lawyer and new tenant of the tiny apartment. Hayes handles the role of the nattily-attired and very neat bridegroom with professional ease. His scenes during the newweds' first argument are the high moments of the show.

Ricki Olson, as his new wife, Corie, does a better than acceptable job as the immature and overanxious bride, but moves a bit too freely around the stage in her attempts to solidify the characterization. Perhaps if she would walk a little instead of running all the time the audience could get involved a little better.

Tri-State Clan Meets in Bayside

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--The Diamond Springs area of this borough in greater Virginia Beach had a camping ground, but only temporarily last weekend.

Lt. and Mrs. William Kuhn of Grand Circle had Lt. Kuhn's brothers and sisters and their children as guests from Pennsylvania and New York. And the Kuhn's yard was full of tents and camping trailers. Mrs. Kuhn said, Adults and children at the "family campground" numbered about 40.

Lt. Kuhn is on the staff of Commander, Amphibious Forces, Atlantic, at the Naval Amphibious Base here. Families visiting were those of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Diffeender, Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kuhn and Mr. and Mrs. William Haldeman of Columbia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Kuhn and Mr. and Mrs. John Kuhn of Lancaster, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bleacher of Norfolk, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hubley of Syracuse, N.Y.

Hollice Stander, as Corie's mother who seems to exist on pink pills, is sometimes not quite old enough in voice and action, but her slight inconsistency detracts little from a very fine and very funny characterization.

The real accolades of the evening go to John Arnold, a newcomer to Cavalier but definitely not a newcomer to theatricals. His fine portrayal of the lecherous Victor Velasco is downright delightful. Arnold had only one week to prepare for the role, but that time appeared to be more than adequate. Arnold's facial expressions and graceful movements are perfect for the role...

Glenn Graham, although not mature enough for the minor role of the telephone repairman, turns in a creditable performance to round out the cast.

The walk-up apartment set is pleasant and fits nicely into the mood, although it shows every time someone slams a door. It is designed by newcomers Herbert Souffer and Frank Miller.

"Barefoot in the Park" is a good comedy and should prove to be a real audience pleaser at Cavalier.

School Supt. Frank W. Cox said drivers in the public school system have an excellent safety record, and the system received a safety award from Aetna for the 1966-67 school year.

There are presently 239 school buses and 79 automobiles used in the school system which are covered by insurance.

Storms Strike Beach

A series of thunderstorms which moved through the greater Virginia Beach area Sunday afternoon, resulted in only minor damage in this city, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN learned.

Officials at the regional U.S. weather bureau reported a measured rainfall of .26 inches during the storms passage. Residents of some city boroughs reported gusty winds and limb damage to trees.

Clenton Shank, manager of the Virginia Beach VEPCO office, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the area in general witnessed "a lot of isolated power failures." According to Shank, these were the result of "tree limbs being blown across power lines, blowing out transformer fuses."

A 'Divide the Power' Plan

Lo and Behold! The mighty dividers still seem at it--the game of breaching the beach, which the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN brought to light in the issue of last week, Aug. 17.

But now, the community-splitting movement has shifted from the political editorial writer we mentioned last week to the news columns of The Virginian-Pilot. At least, it appears so.

In the Aug. 17 issue of the Pilot, there appeared two stories. One apparently was aimed at dividing the Democratic Executive Committee in Virginia Beach by telling one side of what happened at a meeting. The other "news story" implied the Democratic Executive Committee in Portsmouth is split asunder.

Balderdash, sir writers. Loyal party members of the committees are going through the democratic process in working out campaign arrangements. They know that if they do not, the Republican party will pounce.

Meanwhile, we wonder why there are no Pilot stories--fact or fiction--on the shape of the Democratic Executive Committee in Norfolk. We trust there is a formal party organization there.

Or is there just a 'Divide the Power' plan for Norfolk's neighbors?

Holes in His Blend

The big buildup for hotshot Bobby Kennedy is underway again in certain state, national and area publications, all apparently aimed at hoisting him back on the white charger from which he humpty-dumpled on racial matters.

Putting his religion, his shamrock hue, his fertility and respect for his late brother John aside, we see as many holes in Bobby's blend of politics as there are in a kitchen sponge--eastern Mediterranean variety.

We're Not Bragging, But...

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN in the issue of June 1, 1967, quoted Richard S. Holland, Suffolk District highway commissioner, as saying there will be "a mess" at Norfolk's Brambleton Avenue when the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway is completed late this year.

Suddenly, the daily papers in our neighboring city of the Macs discovered the same thing last week. Welcome to the school of enlightenment, neighbors. But remember, the east-west expressway is being built as a two-way affair.

And in our community, where calm prevails, the shaded lawns outnumber the bulldozed lots. The grass is true green, too.

Dialects and Diets

What's the difference between a Potato and a 'Tater? The dialect seems to be the main difference.

But with an Idaho Potato and a regular potato, there's a lot of difference, according to a senator from the 'Tater state'.

ato-labeling" law, claiming it's needed to stop the peel-off spuds are doing in "fresh potato" sales.

We suspect, however, the truth of the matter in our city is that the working, clubbing and camping wives prefer to chomp on chips, buy ready-cut french fries or watch the starch line.

Bumper-to-Bumper Device

Someone was bound to keep the money flowing for research on the rise and fall of the deer-mice population.

A news release from the College of William & Mary in Williamsburg noted recently that the National Institutes of Health have granted $14,800 to Dr. Richard C. Terman "to continue his six-year study of population habits of deer-mice.

"Dr. Terman's primary concern is a self-regulating device of animals which apparently switches on when their numbers are threatened by overcrowding," the release said.

This may all be fine and dandy, but the average guy probably would like to see as much spent on finding out why the driver of the car speeding close behind him in traffic doesn't have a car-speeding device in his head which shouts "danger."

Appreciation

Dear Sir:

I'm writing this letter in regards to an outstanding organization that you have in your Community, the "Linkhorn Bay packets".

Today my Company received 16 individual packages from the "Linkhorn Bay Packets" for distribution to members of this Company.

If ever I saw a morale getter this was it. I feel that such an organization as this within a Community is an outstanding asset to the Community. I know that each member that received one of these packages will never forget it or whenever anyone mentions Virginia Beach, Va.

they will no doubt mention this deed.

Hand Book Needed

Dear Editor:

Mr. C. J. Carpenter's recently published treatise on the activities of the Virginia Beach Police Department expounded fully on many phases of this most valuable service. Mr. Carpenter brought to light the many responsibilities of the Squad as well as the responsibilities of the traveling public. As I read the editorial I became convinced that there was a great need for a hand book of instructions, both for the Squad and general public.

Flooding in Plaza

Dear Editor:

I don't know really why it happens, but everytime there is a heavy rain the streets in our Plaza project are overflowing with water. The main ones are the problem, and I wish somebody would get on the ball and do something about it.

We pay city taxes like everybody else, and we have just as much right to expect the streets which lead to our homes to be passable when it rains.

One of the neighbors said children keep putting trash and other junk in the drains, but I don't know if this is true. We just moved to the Plaza, and while we like the house, life would be more pleasant with less rainwater.

One man, and I won't use his name, went through a low area in the last downpour and he had water on his car's floor-board.

Can somebody do something about it?

Sun Report Whisky-by-Drink Possible in 1968?

Here is an economic report on the first half of 1967 in Virginia Beach which City Council received recently from the city's planning department. It is offered without interpretation:

A total of 1556 building permits were issued as of July 1, 1967, with the value of $21,528,000.00, as against 1530, amounting to $24,033,000.00 during the same period in 1966. In May of 1966, building permits fell off sharply due to the tight money situation. Starting in February of 1967, however, money loosened up slightly and numbers of building permits have increased. We will probably end up with a better year in dollar value in building in 1967 than in 1966. As of January 1, 1967, there were 43,207 dwelling units in the City. So far this year there were 970 additional dwelling unit starts in the City. This brings the trend back into the maximum-minimum estimates of from 1952 to 1966 dwelling unit starts in the City for 1967.

Virginia is one of the nine remaining States with a 6% interest ceiling imposed. North Carolina recently, by emergency legislation, raised the interest to 7%. If Virginia does not follow suit at the next assembly session, the availability of out of state money will become even tighter than it is now. After talking to several banking interests in this area, they all agree that, like liquor by the drink, a raise in the interest rate to 7% has slightly better than a 50-50 chance in the 1968 assembly.

Population in the City of Virginia Beach has been estimated by extrapolating dwelling unit starts from building permits issued monthly. The number of dwelling units is then multiplied by 3.66, a factor generated by using 4.0 persons per dwelling unit with an 8% overall vacancy rate. The estimated population at the beginning of the year was 159,865 people, with the additional 970 dwelling unit starts. The July 1 population was 163,487. With the nearing completion of the Toll Road and Interstate 64 and the continuation of Redevelopment in Norfolk, we should expect a continuing upward trend in the in-migration of families into our City. A raise in the interest rate will, of course, further escalate this trend in in-migration.

The Virginia Department of Labor and Industry has, since 1966, been computing the annual average cost of a "market basket" for the Richmond metropolitan area. This department, beginning July 1, has started the same computation for the Norfolk-Portsmouth metro area. This cost figure is computed by taking a list of items the average family buys for a week's groceries and averaging out a yearly cost for the food. The "market basket" for the Norfolk-Portsmouth metro area in July of 1967 amounted to $22.47 as compared to a $23.19 cost for the Richmond metro area. It is understood that more cities will be taken into this study and after a few years some feel of the relative cost of living in various Virginia localities can be made with these yearly rates. The only thing that can be observed here is that you can eat for less in Virginia Beach than you can in Richmond at this time.

Labor force statistics are difficult to come by on a monthly basis for individual cities, however, the State did furnish the figure that Virginia Beach's total labor force for July 1967 was 40,380 people, or that 24% of the population makes up the labor force. This figure, compared to a Norfolk-Portsmouth metro labor force of 216,600 indicates that 31% of the area's population is labor force. The relatively low percentage for Virginia Beach indicates the large, young, families in Virginia Beach as compared to our sister cities.

	1st Half-1967	1st Half-1966	Percentage difference
Automobiles	855,841	870,000	-1.36
Trucks	940,482	965,000	-2.30
Buses	11,568	11,000	0.68
Total Vehicles	491,893	506,000	-1.89
Passengers	855,990	870,000	-1.50
Combination Tickets	52,311	50,000	0.61
Revenues	$3,249,651	$3,310,000	-1.70

This loss so far in 1967 has been caused to some extent by the poor prevailing weather, Expo 67, and the riots in the Northern cities. The major causes of the loss of revenue, however, is from the 2.30 percent decrease in trucks, increasing numbers are using the nearly completed Interstate 95 rather than paying the Bay Bridge Tunnel toll.

Final rates will not be in Tourism, of course, until October; however, the general feeling in talking to hotel-motel owners is that hotel-motel revenues are slightly off from 1966 (the biggest year so far), but with decent weather during the month of September, the over all picture will probably be comparable to the year 1966. The same causes for this slight decrease in activity can be blamed on those that were outlined in the previous paragraph for the Bay Bridge Tunnel losses.

Out of 47.5 million dollars appropriated for Naval construction in the Norfolk-Portsmouth metropolitan area, the following monies have been appropriated for construction in Virginia Beach:

Fleet Anti-air War Training Center at Dam Neck - training facilities and troop housing - $2,378,000.

Naval Amphibious Base at Little Creek - medical facilities, troop housing and utilities - $6,072,000.00

Naval Amphibious School at Little Creek - training facilities - $693,000.

Naval Air Station at Oceana - Operational and training facilities, maintenance facilities, troop housing and utilities - $9,831,000.

Fort Story was not mentioned in the break-down of military appropriations, however, Fort Bastia, of which Fort Story is a satellite, received $976,000. A portion of this will undoubtedly be spent in Fort Story.

While practically none of the material required for this construction will be procured locally, a great portion of the labor cost will be enjoyed by the City of Virginia Beach.

State Sales Tax

According to requirements of existing state statutes, the sales tax collections are distributed in proportion to the school census during the years when such a census takes place. In all other years the monies are distributed in accordance with population estimates generated by the Bureau of Population and Economic Research at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. The Virginia Beach Comptroller reports that collections from the State, from November 1966 through June of this year amounted to $1,578,280.00. There was no school census in 1966 and this amount was based on Charlottesville's population estimate of 131,900 persons as of July 1966. The Planning Commission's population estimate computed as outlined above on July 1, 1966, was 157,000 persons. Had this population estimate been used, the City would have received $2,228,789.00 or $356,509.00 more dollars than were collected.

Members of your staff have been in contact with Mr. Charles Melberg at Charlottesville and hope to meet with him later in August to attempt to readjust the July 1, 1967, population estimate upward so as to allow for more revenue to be received.

Quotes of Local Interest

To Keep Officers

Adm. Thomas M. Moorer, new CNO in the Pentagon, discussing the Navy's problem of holding onto officers, with or without pilot's wings: "We should make every effort to make a career in service more attractive in order to obtain and retain the type of people required to operate the very complex weapons systems we have today."

Prime Obligation of Christians

Earl Jacobs Jr., local minister in Jehovah's Witnesses, speaking recently at Raleigh, N.C., said, "Although we do not date Armageddon, we feel the urgency of the times rules out it being in the distant future. Therefore, we stress that the prime obligation of Christians today is to aid others to build up their faith in God."

Retail Merchants Seminar

Sumpter T. Priddy, Jr., executive VP of the Virginia Retail Merchants Association, plugging a seminar planned Sept. 27 in Roanoke: "Such topics as shoplifting, wage and hour regulations, and expense control will be discussed, with ample time for questions from the audience."

Soviet Canal Construction

Victor P. Petrov, professor of geography at Shippensburg (Pa.) State College, writing in the U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings: "No other country in the world has undertaken such an extensive program of construction of new canals and restoration of old ones, as has the Soviet Union. They not only provide additional navigable waterways and thus enlarge the transportation network, but they also now connect five seas: the Baltic, the White, the Black, the Sea of Azov, and the Caspian."

Sherman 'Think Tank' Aids Bayside's 'Meadows'

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--The developers of Pembroke Manor are aiming at snagging more national honors with the new Pembroke Meadows home section north of Pembroke Mall Shopping Center on Independence Boulevard.

Six model homes, expected to open in September in Pembroke Meadows, are being decorated by the Potomac, Md., firm of Robert E. Sherman.

He was interior decorator for homes in Pembroke Manor, which won seven national awards.

Sherman said furnishings for the six new model homes are intended to show how imagination and forethought can create the right effect at reasonable cost for the buyer.

The free use of rugs and wall-to-wall carpeting are some

Bad Meat Problem? Meet Stephen Kota

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A 57-year-old resident of King's Grant in greater Virginia Beach has a job of protecting consumers from bad meat and poultry products.

Stephen Kota, who lives on Sunnybrook Lane, said "about 99 per cent" of his office's work involves interstate shipments, and the rest involves interstate shipments, and the rest involves imports.

Kota, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, is a resident representative of the "compliance and evaluation staff" of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service. His territory includes Virginia and parts of North Carolina and West Virginia.

The primary responsibility of the compliance and evaluation staff is consumer protection, he said.

"It is to detect and prevent the use in interstate or foreign commerce of meat or meat food products, poultry and poultry products which are unsound, unwholesome, adulterated or otherwise unfit for human consumption", an official USDA release said.

His office, in the Custom House Building in Norfolk, also handles consumer complaints regarding meat and poultry products which have been prepared under USDA inspection. The phone number of the office is 627-7471.

Kota came to this area six years ago as a liaison man between the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Navy, concerning food inspections. He later was an import meat inspector in Hampton Roads, before duties were extended to interstate shipments.

... a lively tennis ball on a not-so-lively evening: a Sunday night fund-raiser in the Cavalier Beach Club... a first for the first organized group of tennis buffs in the area.

Rapidly gaining recognition throughout the state as well as the city, the Virginia Beach Tennis Patrons Association proved Sunday night that all their swinging isn't done on the tennis courts.

The first fund-raising tennis ball was as bouncy as a brand new ball should be, with the added bounce of a bit of courtly joshing to spark it even more.

Angela Walker prepared a skit, performed by members of the association, lampooning the swinging set... a 10:30-ish sort of floor show that unfortunately brought on the raindrops as well as the laughs.

Not a late-night party, obviously since it was Sunday, it was, nonetheless, a first that shows promise of becoming an annual.

Proceeds will be used to promote tennis throughout the city, and to provide the funds needed for instruction if the city is to become as tennis conscious as the association hopes.

A Woman's Story

A Letter from Arthur: His Last

At this camp, I was the youngest prisoner of war. I tried so hard to be courageous.

After several days of interrogations, I was finally left partially paralyzed. I was beaten on my back with what I thought was a blackjack. All they wanted were names of Jewish people and information regarding other underground workers.

So far as I know, during my stay in this camp none of our underground workers were caught. But this Friday, when I was brought back paralyzed, I was moved from my original cell to another one. I had no idea what more they would do to me. I was so worried about my family. I hadn't heard from any of them... It was then October and since July I had not heard a word. I didn't know if they had been killed, sent away or what.

Mother Marie-Helene came into my cell. I was so depressed. She said, Child, pray, and I prayed so very, very hard that I would hear something of my family.

My prayers were answered, for soon a package came. My mother had written my name, my uncle had written the cell number, my brother had written the city, and my grandmother had written the return address. Therefore, I knew that the four people that I loved so dearly were safe. My brother had been released and so had my uncle.

The seventh installment of A Woman's Story reveals the daily torture Mary Siglilo sustained as a German prisoner in a concentration camp during World War II. Imprisoned, along with her fiancé Arthur Libre for her underground activities, the American-born Belgian now a Virginia Beach resident, tells of her life during this period.

A Catholic nun, Mother Marie-Helene, in charge of the women prisoners, became her trusted confidante and life-long friend. Now in a rest home in Belgium, Mother Marie-Helene still corresponds with Mary. A Norfolkian last year visited her during a tour of Belgium.

The story, in Mary's own words, continues.

It was not a package of goodies, but it did contain a small piece of pink baliste material, some white thread, my Bible, my Rosaries, a few prayers that I had always carried with me, and two handkerchiefs. That was all I had. I had no clothes, but out of this little piece of pink material I made a slip.

Bred And Bored

By Jeanne Magee Tucker
Women's Editor

WOULD YOU BELIEVE... that an emergency squad, answering a late night call, found a feuding couple... the woman so angry that she commanded her trained dog to attack her husband? The animal did... on both arms and the man's back.

... that an area Navy wife, disturbed because her small son's grades (second) were barely at passing level, received the word from psychologists that the child's gifted? So gifted, say they, that her problem now is what to do with him, "How," she asks, "can he almost fail to pass second grade yet still be gifted?" Boredom, maybe?

... that some 37 Eagle-eyed bingo players stayed with it all night recently, found when they closed up shop the next morning, that they'd cleared a sizable sum indeed for the club's (Virginia Beach Eagles) treasury?

... that with the wealth of native greenery that grows almost unattended, an area developer has brought in a stockpile of palm trees to enhance a New-Now subdivision? All winter they'll no doubt be done up in tree-sized refrigerator bags to protect them from the elements. Why bother?

It's like the meal planners for conventions, the ones who unimaginatively select something like roast beef or turkey for the visiting conventioners... many of whom have never been in the state of Virginia before much less sampled her products of the sea and soil.

I find it hard to believe, too, that Navy wives would permit their photos, and those of their children, to appear with the news that their husbands are far, far away.

Crosby Home On Holiday Circuit

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH—Mrs. Malcolm H. Todd Jr., of Chesapeake Colony is chairman, along with Mrs. M. E. Keller, of the Marion Crosby Garden Club's open house Christmas event, this year slated for Dec. 16 and 17.

Beach Clubs

Princess Anne Navy Wives Club #143 will meet for their bi-monthly business meeting at the Oceanic Chapel at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 7. All military wives in the area are invited for the meeting and social get-together. The base nursery will be available for those needing the services of a sitter.

The club vice president, Mrs. Pat Verdon, entertained at her home on Ashlawn Terrace recently in honor of the club treasurer, Mrs. Shelia Kidd, and her husband. The Kidds are leaving the area.

The Norfolk home of the late Mrs. Albert V. Crosby, after whom the garden club was organized and named, and the late Dr. Crosby, will be decorated by club members and opened to the public to raise funds for charity.

Located at 7909 North Shore Road, the focal point of the 12-room house will be a live Christmas tree that will soar four stories. Encircled by an open stairway, some 1000 ornaments will be used to decorate it. Miniature trees will be decorated and placed throughout the house, along with other appropriate holiday decorations.

Mrs. J. H. Moessner, the Crosbys' daughter, will be hostess.

Mrs. Crosby was a past state president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs and a nationally accredited flower show judge.

Mrs. Phillip Russo, her husband, and Edgar Gerloff.

A Woman's Story

While the news cheered me, I found that I was still depressed and began to wonder if my mind was strong enough, and my body able to sustain any more of the torture.

Also, there was the constant fear of being sent to Germany, which was about the worst thing that could happen. The concentration camps there were horrible—far worse than anything I had been in here.

The next day, Saturday, Mother Marie-Helene came to my cell and said, "Child, they are here again."

I could hardly walk. My back had been injured badly and I could hardly walk.

They took me to the original cell I had been in . . . the sister cell that Sister Leontine had been in. In the cell sat two Belgians, members of the M. troops. Actually all of the interrogators had been Belgians.

There is no courtesy shown to you even though you are a lady, so when I entered the cell they sat but made me stand, though I could barely remain on my feet. They told me that if I didn't talk and if I didn't give them the names and whereabouts of underground workers I had worked with that they wouldn't save me at all. One of them took out his gun and twirled it around his finger. On his other hand he wore a very large ring.

I looked up at him . . . and for some reason or another words came to me easily. I said, "You're a man and I'm a woman. If you want to kill me go ahead and do so. You'll not get anything out of me. You can't make me talk."

No doubt I aggravated him because he came right up to me, and with that ring right up in my face he said, "America!"

is a very faraway place. Don't worry about being liberated. He meant I would never see America again.

To this day I can see that ring and to this day I can't stand anyone pointing a finger at me. These are the horrible scars that it leaves on you. Nobody knows . . . To this day, thunder, airplanes going over, far away sounds of demolition, a dripping faucet, steam of a shower, these are the things that are reminders to me.

So he slapped me, he was so aggravated. He said I'd get what was coming to me.

The slap reopened a wound on my face and it was bleeding. Mother Marie-Helene took me to my cell, but of course she couldn't talk to me then.

But she came back later and told me all the Sisters were praying for me.

She said, "You have given all these prisoners a lot of courage; they are following your example, so don't give up. I had confessed to her, so she knew what I had done, but she knew I wouldn't talk."

Sunday morning, I tried to get out of my bunk but I couldn't. I hadn't been able to sleep. My head was hurting, my back was hurting. I felt as washed out as a dish rag. During the night Mother Marie-Helene had brought me a little piece of chocolate. She had walked in her bare stocking feet, so as not to be heard. Even the sound of her humming Rosary she had somehow quieted.

In prison, you always wait for noise, footsteps, shots, the sounds of someone coming.

This time I heard shots. Up to this time, since I was in solitary, I had not been able to talk to anyone, so I didn't know who was being executed when I heard shots. It was the Jewish boy . . . the one whose job it was to find out in the prison where the executions were taking place.

Then I heard footsteps . . . and you wait, wondering where they will stop.

It was the Gestapo, the Germans, and they stopped at my door.

I couldn't get up from my bunk but they said, "Mary Sigillo?"

I said, "Yes."

They said, "We are bringing you the last letter from your fiancé, Arthur Libre, who was executed. That was the first I knew that he had been killed."

Familiar Sight Welcomes P.A. Graduate in Europe

(Editor's Note: Mary Jane Lannon wrote The Virginia Beach Sun from Europe to describe her experiences and impressions there.)

A recent Princess Anne High School graduate traveled half way around the world to see "a good ole American dime store."

Mary Jane Lannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Lannon of Whitehurst Landing Road in Kempsville Borough, is touring Europe with 24 other students as a part of the Virginia Teens to Europe program sponsored by the People-to-People program.

The program was started by former Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who felt that personal interchange between people would help remove misunderstanding, suspicion and prejudice from the world.

Miss Lannon's first stop was Paris. "We passed a sign which Miss Lannon said, 'Peace in Vietnam, U.S. Go Home,'" she wrote.

It was in London, the group's second stop, that she noticed the dime store. "It sure was a pleasant sight to see."

The size of the buildings impressed Miss Lannon in Brussels, Belgium. "You can't imagine how enormous and immense these buildings are. They tower sky high.

"Shortly after leaving the hotel for our tour of the city, we were met by a parade of soldiers who performed just for us. So far, the people have been so patient and so very understanding."

Her visit to Amsterdam, Netherlands, included trips to the homes of Napoleon and of Anne Frank, she said.

"We toured a diamond factory also. It made us feel poor."

While touring Germany, the group rode a sky lift up a mountain side.

"The mountain sights are breath taking, especially along the river. We saw a scenic castle towering over the Rhine."

The trip, by bus, also includes Switzerland, tiny Liechtenstein and Italy.

Bayside High's Wong Discovers 'Systems' Way

BAYSIDE BOROUGH-- Two Bayside High seniors, with their eyes on science and their feet on the ground, recently returned from a seven-week science camp at Centre College in Danville, Ky.

Bon Wong of Sunrise Drive and Victor Kalasinsky of Gardenwood Parkway were two of 64 outstanding high school students from 18 states chosen for the National Science Foundation summer program.

Wong studied a course called systems analysis, which to him is "something very new." "It is a useful course...there is so much to learn from it," he said.

Kalasinsky studied the mathematical method of science.

PEUGEOT 404 SEDAN

It's called Peugeot. The most durable car you ever met. But don't take our word for it. American Rodding, the performance car magazine, recently acclaimed Peugeot "The Toughest Car in the World".

Toughness is part of the story. The rest includes solid steel sliding sunroof, safety-proved Michelin X tires, reclining seats that convert to beds, rack-and-pinion steering, 4-speed synchromesh transmission, power brakes, stainless steel bumpers and trim and door-to-door carpeting. Best of all, every one of these "extras" is included in the basic price. The only option you can buy is the new 3-speed torque converter automatic transmission, available on 1967 models.

There are other changes on the 1967 models, too. Bigger trunk. New "breathable" leatherette upholstery. More horsepower. Improved suspension. And many more. See us today and drive a tough bargain. It's called Peugeot. (AVAILABLE IN THE 404 SEDAN AND 404 STATION WAGONS).
